Lewis to Resign If Green Will; Martin Sees Ford

A. F. L. Chief Says Peace Move Is 'Fraud'
Rival 'Would Still Dictate,' He Declares
Auto Workers' Leader at River Rouge
Talks 32-Hour Week With Magnate's Aide

On the Labor Front

JOHN L. LEWIS, C. I. O. chieftain, offered to quit that position if William Green would resign as A. F. of L. president. Green called the offer a "fraud" and said he would leave his continuance in office to the federation membership.

HENRY FORD and Homer Martin, auto union president who long has carried on warfare with Ford over unionization of his plants, had a brief meeting but Ford left to a subordinate a discussion with Martin of the union's 32-hour week proposal.

THE A. F. L. CARRIED to the Supreme Court its fight on the National Labor Relations Board, charging in a brief that the board is "a proponent of the C. I. O."

'Fraud,' Says Green

By Sidney Olson.

Pale and serious, John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, yesterday summoned the press and solemnly offered to resign his C. I. O. leadership if William Green, president, American Federation of Labor, would simultaneously step down.

A. F. of L. reactions varied from derisive catcalls through quiet skepticism to the angry statement of Green, in Houston, Tex., last night that Lewis' offer was "an attempted fraud and deception."

Green added: "To anyone familiar with the labor situation, it is obvious that even if he resigned as chairman of the C. I. O., he would still remain its dictator behind the scenes."

Surprise to Aides

Lewis took the step suddenly, without consulting his aides. It came with equal surprise to his associates, who first learned of his action in news flashes, it was learned.

Lewis was unusually serious as he made the announcement. Sometimes he speaks with his tongue obviously playing about in his cheek, his eyes twinkling as he watches reporters' reactions. This time he merely lit his cigar, read the statement, asked formally if there were any questions, and stalked out of the huge main office to his smaller "working office."

Federation leaders were quick to point out that if Lewis quit his C. I. O. post he would still remain as chief of the United Mine Workers, the C. I. O's parent body, whence he receives a $25,000 a year salary. They also noted contrastingly that Green would be jobless if he quit the Federation, as he holds no lesser office.

First dispatches from Houston reported Green as stating that Lewis would get his answer from delegates to the federation's convention there. This was taken as referring to the coming federation election of officers, near the end of this week, where Green is unopposed for re-election.

Lewis Deplores Strife

Lewis stressed in his statement the factor that has been increasingly mentioned throughout the growing pressure from all sides for a peaceful and united labor movement. He said:

"The men and women who will pay the price of this conflict are not at the Houston convention. The hymn of hate chanted there makes me feel very sad, not because of the scurrilous epithets that were

Martin at River Rouge

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Oct. 11.—Henry Ford had a brief conversation today with Homer Martin, head of a C. I. O. union seeking to organize Ford's employes.

Labor problems were not discussed, but later Martin talked with Harry Bennett, Ford personnel director, about the union's attempt to obtain a 32-hour work week in the automotive industry during periods of re-employment.

At the same time, other leaders of the United Automobile Workers were discussing the shortened week with General Motors and Chrysler Corporation officials.

Chief speculation centered about Martin's visit to the huge Ford Rouge plant, where some of his U. A. W. associates once were driven away by fist-swinging Ford employes.

Ford Shook Hands

Ford, whose views that labor unions are unnecessary were made part of the record at a Labor Relations Board hearing in a U.A.W. complaint last year, entered the Rouge plant administration building ten minutes after Martin.

Bennett explained, "Mr. Ford comes by my office about that time every day, and he simply dropped in to shake hands with Martin."

Martin later said, "The company should be advised at first hand, not second hand, of the policies and program of our organization. Labor and industry must co-operate and there must be a starting point. That is why we are here today."

Chrysler Parley Ends

Bennett said, "I have invited Mr. Martin to return and talk things over when he believes any supply firm with which we do business is unfair to the U. A. W. If he believes we ourselves are unfair, he will be in here on our necks. The minute we need him, we will call him."

The conference of a U. A. W. committee with Chrysler officials recessed after the union presented its request for a 32-hour work week until all employes with seniority have been recalled. Herman L. Weckler, Chrysler vice president, said he would call another meeting later this week after a study of the U. A. W. proposal.

The U. A. W.'s conference with General Motors was adjourned tonight without announcements from either side.

New Liquor Chief Doesn't Want to 'Offend Even Drys'

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Dr. Wesley A. Sturges, selected president of the Distilled Spirits Institute today, said he was convinced the "responsible" part of the liquor industry wanted the business so conducted as not to "offend the sensibilities even of the drys."

The successor to the late W. Forbes Morgan, who was believed to have been paid $50,000 a year, added he had great respect for one who abstains from drinking as a "wholesome influence for temperance."

But, he said, his tolerance didn't extend to any person "who feels ordained to impose upon me or my friends a statute which says I may not lawfully purchase or consume any alcoholic beverage."

Dr Sturges is a member of the Yale law faculty and a director of the American Arbitration Association.

17 Lose Lives, More Missing In Forest Fires

On U. S.-Canada Border
2 Mothers Among Dead
Tried to Save Babies

By the Associated Press.

Three more deaths late yesterday brought to 17 the toll from the northern Minnesota and nearby Canadian brush and forest fires. Provincial police at Fort Frances, Ont., said several persons were missing in the area 30 miles northwest of Hat City, where 12 others were burned fatally.

The latest victims were Joseph Dardis, 67, International Falls, Minn., who died of a heart attack while aiding in rescue work, and Benny Fults, 60, whose body was found near his burned cabin in Dance Township, Ont. An unidentified man was also found dead in Dance Township.

Showers Aid Fighters

Twelve of the dead were members of the Frank, William and Noah Labelle families, living in Dance Township, Province of Ontario. A Park Rapids, Minn., CCC boy was killed in the crash of two forestry service fire trucks and a fire fighter suffocated near International Falls.

The fire danger was diminished somewhat by overnight showers but a brisk south wind was again fanning flames, crowding fire lines manned by more than 3,000 men aided by airplanes.

Details of the Canadian woods tragedy were received by provincial police at Fort Frances. The three LaBelle brothers' families tried to escape first by horse-drawn rig and then afoot after burning trees blocked the road.

Frank LaBelle directed the trapped group, including mostly small children to lie on their faces in the wood's trail.

Mother Disobeys, Dies

Those who did so were saved but one of the mothers who perished became panicky and with a 1-year-old child in her arms, tried to outrace the flames. In the excitement, other children followed her.

"The thick smoke must have overcome them before they got very far," said Constable David Hamilton. "We found the bodies a few feet apart with the two mothers' bodies resting over the small babies as if they had tried to hide them from the flames."

Nine persons, mainly surviving members of the three families, were in Fort Frances hospitals.

Strachey Barred; Denies He Ever Was Communist

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—John Strachey, British leftist, today was ordered excluded from the United States.

The order, issued by a special board of inquiry at Ellis Island, classed the lecturer and author as "a nonimmigrant not in possession of a properly visaed passport."

Strachey arrived yesterday on the liner Normandie and spent last night aboard the ship. Today he was taken to Ellis Island for the hearing.

As soon as it was completed, Strachey filed an appeal with the Secretary of Labor and the board of review in Washington.

U. S. Awards $61,100,000 For Pa. Toll Superhighway

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 11.—In the thick of this State's hotly fought election campaign, two Administration agencies yesterday made $61,100,000 available to Pennsylvania for the longest toll road in the country.

Arrangements for an RFC loan of $35,000,000 were announced by Chairman Edward N. Jones, of the Pennsylvania turnpike commission, after the Public Works Administration had approved a grant totaling $26,100,000.

The four-lane, 162-mile superhighway will provide a high-speed all-weather route straight through from Harrisburg to Pittsburgh with tolls assessed on all traffic to amortize the debt.

The announcement came in the face of charges by Judge Arthur H. James, Republican gubernatorial nominee, that WPA, PWA and general State authority projects are being used for political purposes in a "desperate stop-James" effort.

James is opposed for Governor by Charles Alvin Jones, Pittsburgh lawyer, who declares continuance of liberalism and the Roosevelt New Deal is the one campaign issue while Senator James J. Davis, Republican nominee, fights it out with

Hague Puts Jersey City Behind Ely

Barbour Skeptical
Suspects Lip Service
Confident, Anyway

By Robert C. Albright.
A Staff Correspondent.

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 11.—"The big boss is going to town."

Down the line the word has been passed. Going to town. Going to town for William H. J. Ely, Mayor Frank Hague's hand-picked candidate for the United States Senate.

They say you can always tell when there's a Hague deal on in Jersey City. The other party is always a "wonderful fellow." It used to be W. Warren Barbour, Republican nominee for the Senate. Now it happens to be Ely.

Barbour Unimpressed

But Barbour, the big multi-millionaire former pugilist who served five years in the Senate and now seeks an encore, doesn't seem to be worried. Hague was "going to town" for Percy H. Stewart, Barbour's opponent in 1932. Stewart got window-dressing support. Barbour was elected.

But now, the Hague men say, things are different.

"The boss really means it. He's going to town and Barbour's going to take a shellacking."

What Hague is going to do has been the big question mark in this State's senatorial contest. It is important, because Mayor Hague controls Jersey City voting machinery lock, stock and barrel. Barbour would have to poll a lead of some 125,000 votes in other New Jersey counties to offset Jersey City ballots if "the big boss really means it."

Barbour claims he will do that anyway. Republican leaders are so certain of victory here that they already have chalked up this seat as a certain addition to the Senate's Republican minority.

Talk was until recently that Hague would not seriously oppose the Republican nominee. If Ely won it would have been a Hague victory. If Barbour won it would have been a Hague victory. If Ely lost it would have been New Deal defeat.

Mayor Lying Low

After Ely was selected, Hague packed up and went to Europe. He has remained in the background since his return. There is a little matter of a justice department investigation still to be settled.

When Norman Thomas was bundled out of Jersey last spring, by two Hague police officers, the Socialist leader brought kidnapping charges against them. FBI agents are now in Jersey City and evidence will be laid before a grand jury next week. There were published reports FBI would drop its civil liberties investigation. Attorney General Cummings denied this.

Still the Jersey City mayor and Democratic national committeeman is giving every surface indication of loyalty to the New Deal. Hague resolutions adopted by both county and city Democratic committees "reaffirm allegiance to the Administration of Franklin Delano Roosevelt" and "congratulate" Hague on selection of Ely, who is campaigning as a New Dealer.

And now down through the organization the word is being passed that Hague is "going to town" for his candidate. Instructions have been issued for a huge Ely rally in the Jersey City Armory October 17,

Russia Protests Briton's Charge It Didn't Dare Fight

London, Oct. 1 (AP).—Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky today protested a statement last night by Earl Winterton, member of the British cabinet, on Russia's position in the Czechoslovak crisis.

Winterton said in a speech that Russia did not offer to help in the crisis but "only made very vague promises owing to her military weakness."

The Soviet embassy said Foreign Commissar Litvinoff, on September 21, clearly stated Russia was ready to fulfill all her obligations toward Czechoslovakia along with France.

"It is not the fault of the U. S. S. R. if these proposals brought no response," the embassy concluded.

Germany to Parole Baron Von Cramm

Berlin, Oct. 11 (AP).—The ministry of justice announced today Baron Gottfried von Cramm, Germany's ace tennis player, would be paroled October 16 with suspension for two years of the remainder of his one year prison sentence on an immorality charge.

It was explained good conduct was responsible.

Civil Service Balks FCC Exemptions

McNinch Is Beaten
60 Top Jobs Involved
Mitchell Is Caustic
President Concerned

Civil Service Commission Chairman Harry B. Mitchell yesterday denied the request of Communications Commission Chairman Frank R. McNinch for exemption of 60 top commission employes from civil service status under an executive order of President Roosevelt.

Mitchell described the request as "neither in harmony with the letter or the spirit of the Executive order."

"The Civil Service would not agree to except whole classes of employes," he said. "Under the general statement which we issued sometime ago we would not make any sweeping exclusions such as Mr. McNinch recommended."

President Recognizes Split

Two members of the communications commission publicly protested McNinch's recommendation which would exempt from the Executive orders commission attorneys, certain examiners, confidential clerks, secretaries and "experts."

The dispute between Mitchell and McNinch which served to bring long-existing communication commission friction into the limelight again was called to the attention of President Roosevelt at his press conference. The President remarked that McNinch was still ill in a hospital. He acknowledged the split within the communications commission.

McNinch's request to the Civil Service Commission was attacked in a letter signed jointly by Commissioners George Henry Payne and T. A. M. Craven and apparently reflecting widespread unrest among Communication Commission employes.

Secrecy is Attacked

Payne and Craven charged that McNinch had acted secretly and without consulting the full commission membership. They urged the Civil Service not to act until a "deliberate decision" could be made.

"Commissioner Craven and myself," Payne declared, "when we found that the many fine people employed by the FCC were completely disorganized by this attack on their position and standing in the Government service, felt there should be some public statement as to opposition. In the four years that we have been trying to build up the Communications Commission so it would be responsive to public service, it was most essential that the employes should know that they would find loyalty and appreciation of merit."

Payne made public a copy of McNinch's letter to the Civil Service Commission together with a memorandum. The letter was dated September 23, the memorandum September 24.

Payne charged he and Craven had not seen either until September 30.

Annapolis Head Protests

Several months ago the Civil Service requested heads of all departments and agencies to submit lists of positions considered policy-determining or for other reasons ruled out of civil service status. The largest exclusions—or most certainly the most spectacular ones

Japanese Reported Landing Forces North of Hongkong

Hongkong (Wednesday), Oct. 12 (AP).—Usually reliable Chinese sources said that a large number of Japanese forces had landed at 4:30 a. m. today at Hachung, in Bias Bay, north of Hongkong.

Captains of incoming coastal steamers also said that they had seen a large number of transport ships in Bias Bay Tuesday night.

It was believed the Japanese aimed at cutting the Kowloon-Canton Railway and dominating the Canton River mouth to cut off supplies from Canton.

Tokyo (Wednesday), Oct. 12 (AP).—Domei (Japanese news agency) reported today that Japanese forces had captured the Peiping-Hankow Railway town of Sinyang, 100 miles north of Hankow, main objective of their central China drive.

Held in Sudetenland
Criticized Fuehrer
Voiced U. S. Distrust

Mrs. Harriet Hawes, mother of Mary Hawes, special correspondent for The Washington Post, who told how she was detained near Eger, by Germans who released her after questioning

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Prague, Oct. 11.—Mrs. Harriet Hawes, mother of Miss Mary Hawes, special correspondent of The Washington Post, celebrated her sixty-seventh birthday here today in describing her detention by German authorities in Sudetenland for stating that "the United States will never trust Hitler."

Mrs. Hawes, who lives at 2 Belfield road, Alexandria, Va., said that soon after she entered the German districts of Czechoslovakia last week, she was taken to Eger. She said that a citizen had heard her express mistrust of the Fuehrer on the ground that German troops were entering Sudeten towns ahead of schedule.

After her release, she made her way toward Prague, spending the night in Bochev, which was still held by the Czechs. When she awoke, however, she discovered that the town had been occupied by German troops during the night. Mrs. Hawes finally was able to reach the Czech capital by way of Pilsen.

[Mrs. Hawes' son, Alexander Hawes, NLRB attorney, said last night at his home, 1640 Twenty-first street northwest, that his mother decided to sail for Europe three weeks ago "on the spur of the moment" because she was worried about the fate of her daughter in Prague. This was her first trip across the Atlantic in 12 years, he said.

["We had sent a couple of cables to Mary," Hawes explained, "but had received no reply. My mother made up her mind to go to Czechoslovakia to find out for herself how Mary was getting on."

[A noted archaeologist, Mrs. Hawes made important excavations in Crete about 35 years ago. She was a Red Cross nurse during the Spanish-American War, conducted extensive relief work among the Serbians in Corfu in 1915-16, and was the organizer and first director of the Smith College relief unit in the Department of the Somme, France, in 1917. A life member of the Archaeological Institute of America, Mrs. Hawes was a lecturer in pre-Christian art at Wellesley College from 1920 to 1936. Her husband, Charles Henry Hawes, is a well-known anthropologist.—Editor.]

Guard Keeps Cardinal From Visiting Hitler

'For Own Protection'
He Issues New Appeal
Cathedral Is Crowded

By the United Press.

Vienna, Oct. 11.—Catholic leaders revealed tonight that all movements of Theodore Cardinal Innitzer, archbishop of Vienna, are subject to police approval although Nazi authorities insisted that the bodyguard assigned to the Cardinal is purely for his own "protection."

The police, maintaining heavy guards around the cardinal's partly-wrecked palace, advised him against leaving it unless he is escorted.

As a result of the extensive precautionary measures, designed to prevent new outbreaks of anti-Catholic disorders in St. Stephen's square, the 62-year-old cardinal was unable to leave during the day for Berlin as he had planned.

Informed church circles had reported that Cardinal Innitzer wanted to confer in Berlin with Mgr. Cesar Orsenigo, who protested to the German Foreign Office against the Vienna disorders.

It had been reported that he might confer personally with Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

The devout and a sprinkling of curious persons crowded St. Stephen's Cathedral for early worship today but Cardinal Innitzer did not

Nazis' Move For Pact Met Coldly Here

Treaty Held Unlikely
Dr. Funk to Seek It
He Leaves Turkey

Little likelihood of this country's entering into a bi-lateral trade agreement with Germany was seen here yesterday, after Walther Funk, German economics minister, had announced at Ankara, Turkey, that he intended to open negotiations with the United States for such a treaty.

After concluding a trade agreement with Turkey, Funk was quoted by the Associated Press as saying:

"I am concluding bi-lateral accords based on the barter of goods between Germany and the Balkan States, and upon my return to Berlin I will start trade negotiations with the United States based on the same method, which is most adaptable to present international conditions."

State Department officials declined to comment specifically but it was recalled that Secretary Hull previously has said this country would consider an agreement with Germany but only on the multilateral basis, with the most-favored-nation clause included.

Germany at present is on the trade "blacklist" of this country because she discriminates against United States goods in her dealings with other lands.

Hungary Takes Border Cities From Czechs Amid Cheers

By the Associated Press.

Ipolysag (near the Czechoslovak-Hungarian border), Oct. 11.—Thousands of Hungarian soldiers marched through a barrage of red, white and pink roses today to occupy this Czechoslovak border town as a symbol of the territorial settlement Hungary demands.

[A British news agency (Reuter's) dispatch from Prague to London said encroachments on Czechoslovak territory by the German army of occupation were reported from several parts of the new frontier.

[Near Pilsen, it was asserted, Germans crossed the line at five points despite protests from Czechoslovak observers and penetrated 10 miles in one place.]

Khaki-clad Hungarian troops occupied Ipolysag at 1:20 p. m. (7:20 a. m., E. S. T.), greeted by a great splurge of color, fiery Hungarian music and a tremendous turnout of Hungarians.

For hours before the troops passed the international barrier at noon thousands of peasants gathered and lined the highway for 10 miles into Ipolysag. They sang and danced. Scores of peasant girls ran up to the Holy Land Strife Flares Into War; Official Bombed

Cavalry Arrives
Arab Towns Blasted
Ask U. S. Intercede
Freeman Joins Plea

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, Oct. 11.—An attempt to assassinate the British district governor of Jerusalem and another battle against Arab outposts marked the bitter dispute today among Arabs, Jews and British authorities attempting to restore order.

Four bombs were hurled at Edward Keith-Roach's auto from the old city walls in front of the Rockefeller Museum.

Keith-Roach, governor since 1931, escaped injury, as did occupants of two military escort cars and a police car which accompanied him.

Reinforcements of British troops were called out in northern Palestine to assist police in battling an Arab band near Mount Carmel, where in Biblical times Elijah offered sacrifices.

Throughout the night British forces engaged the band, which was strengthened by the addition of many Arab villagers. Air force planes were sent up to illuminate the scene with parachute flares.

Almost immediately after their arrival from India yesterday, the Royal Scots' Greys, one of the few remaining horse regiments in the British army, was called to help in the battle near Mount Carmel.

The Greys formed part of 2,400 troops arriving on three troop ships as the advance guard of reinforcements sent to restore peace to the troubled Holy Land.

Native Homes Destroyed

At Lydda, Palestine's main railway junction, 21 Arab homes were destroyed by British troops because of recent attacks on military police.

The Arab sub-manager of Barclay's Bank branch in Nazareth was wounded by unidentified assailants.

In Jerusalem a Jew was seriously wounded. An Arab was found slain later.

A death toll of five was reported after 20 separate incidents of killing, sabotage, arson, robbery and sniping in the last 24 hours.

Dominion Status Asked

Cairo, Oct. 11 (AP)—The Moslem Congress today adopted unanimously sweeping demands for furthering the Arab cause in Palestine.

The demands, virtually the same as those proposed by the Congress resolutions committee last night, asked an end to Jewish immigration to Palestine, declared Britain's proposed partition of Palestine into separate Jewish, Arab and British sections unacceptable, and said the British mandate over the Holy Land must be abolished.

The program called for nullification of the Balfour declaration of November 2, 1917, in which Britain pledged establishment of a national home for Jewish people in Palestine and asked for the establishment of a Palestine parliamentary government.

Attending the congress were delegates from French and Spanish Morocco, Syria, the Lebanon, Palestine, India, Yugoslavia and Yemen.

Green Defies Challenge To Step Down

R.F.C. Loans Attacked
Wage Act Criticized

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., Oct. 11.—President William Green of the American Federation of Labor tonight placed his future as head of the federation in the hands of "5,000,000 workmen." He called John L. Lewis' offer to resign as C. I. O. chairman, if Green would step down as A. F. L. president, "an attempted fraud on the public."

"It is obvious," Green said, "that even if he (Lewis) resigned as chairman of C. I. O., he still would remain its dictator."

Green, as yet unopposed, is up for re-election Friday.

"The presidency of the American Federation of Labor is an elective office," Green said. "The chairmanship of the C. I. O. is an entirely different proposition. The officers of the C. I. O. are not elected by the workers they presume to represent. They are self-constituted, self-appointed, self-perpetuating.

Calls Lewis Dictator

"I conceive it to be my duty as president of the A. F. of L. to be the spokesman for the majority of the 5,000,000 workers who rule the federation. I have never sought and I do not now seek to impose my personal views on the members of the federation, nor to control or dominate its policies. In every statement and in every act of the A. F. of L. I have sought earnestly and honestly to present the majority viewpoint.

"On the other hand, the chairman of the C. I. O., as everyone knows, is the dictator of the C. I. O. He has not once even consulted the membership of the C. I. O. during his regime.

"Now he offers to resign if I will.

"Well, the World Series is over, but the chairman of the C. I. O. is still making grandstand plays. His offer is an attempted fraud and deception on the public. To anyone familiar with the labor situation, it is obvious that even if he resigned as chairman of the C. I. O. he would still remain its dictator behind the scenes because he would remain as president and dictator of the United Mine Workers of America, the union which is the financial agent of the C. I. O. and whose funds are being wantonly wasted in a vain effort to keep the C. I. O. alive . . ."

R. F. C. Resolution Studied

Green said the federation workers, through their delegates, would decide whether it is in the interest of organized labor "to re-elect me or to retire me from the office I have held for 14 consecutive terms."

Foremost of the resolutions before the convention today were those proposing removal of Reconstruction Finance Corporation officials for reputedly lending funds to employers maintaining below-standard labor conditions, and a proposal to study public works planning at long range.

The R. F. C. resolution, supported by the plotters' union, was referred to the federation's executive council, after James Duffy, president of the potters' international, had pleaded from the floor that the convention take some action against "the pouring of Federal funds into the hands of employers who are paying 40 per cent less wages than employers who use organized potters."

Nonpartisan League Scored

"This is our bread and butter," Duffy said. "Please do something about it. Unless you do, I am mightily afraid the per capita assessment of the potters' union will begin to decline."

Duffy charged "some individuals who couldn't go to any bank to borrow money, because of their political influence, are able to obtain Federal funds to finance plants that pay low wages."

President Green said the potter's resolution would be placed high on the executive council's calendar.

Pay Act Criticized

The resolutions committee, reporting on the proposal from the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance urging the federation to reaffiliate with labor's Non-Partisan League, said the league was "a ventriloquist's dummy for the C. I. O." and is "devoted chiefly to promoting the personal ambitions of C. I. O. leaders."

The convention adopted a resolutions committee report which contended that authority given the wage-hour administrator to accept or reject the minimum wage recommendations of industry committees made "puppets" of the committees and "subjugates them to the absolute wish and will of the administrator."

The report also pointed to the need for revising sections of the law which it said provided for more than a single minimum wage rate. It also objected to the absence from the statute of any definition for the terms "apprentice" and "learner."

Founders May Quit C. I. O.

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—A spokesman for the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union said today the union's general executive board would meet in about two weeks and may decide at that time whether to withdraw from the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The union, headed by David Dubinsky, is one of the most powerful and richest in the country, and was one of the original American Federation of Labor unions to form the C.I.O. For a long time Dubinsky has sought peace between the C.I.O. and A.F.L.

Henry Allen Asks That Relief Be Relieved 'Ponderous Maladministration' Its Burden

Milwaukee, Oct. 11 (AP).—Henry J. Allen, newspaper editor, of Topeka, Kans., and former U. S. Senator, last night urged elimination of "ponderous maladministration" and politics from the Nation's relief setup.

ALLEN

Allen, speaking before the City Club, said:

"If the government had worked as hard to decrease unemployment as it has to increase it, the situation would have been far different. What will happen if we continue piling up four and five billion dollar expenditures for relief deliberately created? Bankruptcy, that's all."

Allen said there is a shortage of labor while millions are on relief rolls. He charged that those on relief get so much they refuse to work where work is offered.

Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee headquarters said yesterday that Charles West, former Undersecretary of the Interior and confidante of President Roosevelt, would speak at party rallies in three States during the next week.

A spokesman said West informed the committee he would appear at Indianapolis today, at Wilmington, Del., October 14; Norristown, Pa., October 15, and in Pittsburgh October 17 and 18.

The committee said the fourth engagement was in Ohio on a date to be determined by West and State Democratic headquarters.

Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 11 (AP).—The Republican ticket in Pennsylvania's November election today had the endorsement of William F. Smith, of Punxsutawney, a former State commander of the American Legion.

He said in a broadcast that "there has been a definite policy and program to change our economic system" and asserted that unemployment in Pennsylvania was 25 per cent higher than the average for the Nation.

"Anyone who tells you that industry . . . is not fleeing from Pennsylvania is telling a falsehood," he said, urging election of the entire Republican ticket: James J. Davis as United States Senator, Judge Arthur H. James as Governor, Samuel S. Lewis as lieutenant governor and William S. Livengood as secretary of internal affairs.

Mercer, Pa., Oct. 11 (AP).—Gov. Earle, continuing today his whirlwind tour of western Pennsylvania, declared here that the record of the last Republican Administration "speaks far better than their campaign speakers."

Earle, the Democratic candidate for United States Senator, asserted that Republicans were using "the same old ballyhoo that Alf Landon used" two years ago to "deceive the people by promising relief for the unemployed."

"The Republican spokesman knows just as well as I that the normal function of government accounts for less than 10 per cent of all expenditures and he knows we are spending less for these functions than the previous Republican Administration," he said.

Oscar Leser, Maryland Republican nominee for Senator, reported to the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee yesterday that he had spent $1,726 and received no contributions in his primary campaign, since making his last previous report. Earlier he had listed no contributions and expenditures of $270.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, reported totals to date of $3,392 in contributions and expenditures of $521.

Cavalryman Gets $50,000 for Loss Of Eye in Crash

One of the largest damage verdicts in Fairfax County history—$50,000—was awarded yesterday to Carl A. Negley, former member of the Third Cavalry Band, Fort Myer, for the loss of his right eye and injuries to his left in an automobile crash August 8, 1936.

The verdict was against Dennis Owens and Linquin Owens, operators of a trucking concern in Roseboro, N. C. The accident occurred on the Washington-Richmond highway south of Alexandria.

Negley said his car crashed into the rear of a stalled, unlighted hauling van. While he was in a dazed condition, the plaintiff testified, the Owens pair placed him on the running board of his own car.

A third car, said Negley, smashed into his machine as he lay on the running board, hurling him 20 feet in the air.

Census to Employ 150,000 in 1940

Approximately 150,000 persons will be employed in 1940 to tabulate the census returns, the Department of Commerce announced yesterday. About 8,000 will work in Washington.

The department is seeking a building here for the 8,000 workers, to be ready for occupancy by July 1, 1939. If the hunt for the required building should prove futile, one may be built. Space required is 420,000 square feet of floor space.

Mill Sit-Downers Assessed Damages

Philadelphia, Oct. 11 (AP).—Two hundred and four former employes of the McNeely & Price Co. tannery have been ordered in court here to pay $5,000 for damage to stock in a sit-down strike in July, last year.

U. S. Launches Cotton Textile Pay Inquiry

Differential Possible 15 Branches in Trade Meeting a 'Honeymoon'

Wage differentials within the cotton textile industry appeared a possibility last night, as "Industry Committee No. 1" of the wage-hour division of the Labor Department decided to explore wage conditions in 15 branches of the trade.

Chairman Donald A. Nelson announced that "information committees" for both employers and workers would be asked to advise the main committee "what would happen" in their branch of the industry if minimum wages of 30, 35 or 40 cents were established.

It was the first meeting of the industry committee authorized under the wage-hour law, and Chairman Nelson called it "their honeymoon meeting," with complete harmony prevailing.

Effective October 24

Minimum wages of 25 cents an hour for interstate labor generally automatically go into effect October 24, and between that level and 40 cents industry committees will recommend the highest wage schedules an industry can pay without substantially curtailing employment.

Nelson said he would say in effect to each of the cotton textile "information" committees:

"What is the highest wage you can pay immediately, and if you can't pay a higher wage, we would like to know the competitive reasons why?"

To Study Competition

Nelson said the question of wage differentials would necessarily arise within the industry, but recognition of 15 separate branches of the industry did not mean there would be a separate wage level for each. He indicated the main committee would attempt to keep the number of textile wage levels to a minimum. He said the committee in some instances might investigate "competitive" factors forcing a lower wage.

At the initial meeting of the group the committee was organized for immediate action and special subcommittees were set up to determine what percentage of wool fibre in woven goods would disqualify it from inclusion in cotton textiles, and whether knitted underwear was a cotton textile. Nelson said the information committees would be appointed at once and the main committee hoped to have wage recommendations ready for Administrator Andrews "within 90 to 100 days."

The committee broke down the separate branches of the industry on which separate data will be sought into the following broad classifications: knitting (if included), bleaching and finishing of cotton; silk and rayon throwing; silk and rayon weaving; silk and rayon finishing; carded yarn; combed yarn; print cloth and sheeting goods; cotton waste; cotton batting; fabrics; velvet; cordage twine and jute; lace and spun silk yarn manufacturing.

"They Want to Comply"

Asked if he found a desire within the industry to step-up wages rapidly, Nelson said "they want to comply with the law, and that's in the law, if it doesn't increase unemployment."

Before the meeting, Emil Rieve, representing the American Federation of Hosiery workers on the industry committee, said he would urge a 40 cent first-year minimum for the industry.

At an earlier press conference, Administrator Andrews said lack of funds would force his division to rely heavily on State labor departments to enforce the law in its early stages. He said probably only four regional administrators would be named before Congress returns.

Meantime the division's legal staff was at work on definitions of interstate commerce and a listing of industries affected by the automatic 25-cent floor going into effect October 24. This will be announced early next week.

Asked what position he would take on prosecution of violators on the borderline of interstate commerce, he repeated that he would "go to the bat" in court for those honestly erring, but would make matters hot for the "chiselers."

American View of Czech Deal Measured
Munich Pact Laid Basis for War, Public Says

U. S. View of Czech Settlement

Within one day after the four-power conference in Munich sealed the fate of Czechoslovakia, the American Institute of Public Opinion began a Nation-wide survey of the attitude of American voters. Incomplete returns are summarized below.

"Do you believe that England and France did the best thing in giving in to Germany instead of going to war?"

YES	60%
NO	40

"Do you think that Germany's demand for the annexation of the Sudeten German areas in Czechoslovakia was justified?"

YES	27%
NO	73

"Do you think that this settlement (agreed to by England, France and Germany) will result in peace for a number of years or in a greater possibility of war?"

PEACE	42%
WAR	58

New York, Oct. 11.—Incomplete returns from the first comprehensive survey of American opinion on the Czech crisis show that a majority of American voters believe that Hitler's annexation of Sudetenland were not justified, but that England and France did the best thing in giving in to Germany rather than going to war over that particular issue.

GALLUP.

The survey also finds that at a time when European chancelleries were proclaiming a new era of peace, the American public remained skeptical, the majority believing the Czech settlement has not laid the basis for peace in Europe.

The survey to test American sentiment was begun by the Institute within 24 hours after the four-power conference in Munich which ended the war crisis by partitioning the Czech state. Through a Nation-wide staff of more than 600 field investigators the Institute canvassed the opinions of a cross-section of American voters of all ages.

Their predominant reaction was one of sympathy for Czechoslovakia, evidenced by a vote of more than 7 to 3 that Hitler's demands on the little republic were not justified. But overshadowing this sentiment was a deep-seated horror of war. Six voters in ten said they thought England and France acted wisely in avoiding bloodshed over the Czech issue. Typical comments on this question were: "It saved a lot of lives," Czechoslovakia was not a big enough issue for a world war," and "It hurt the Czechs, but England and France were not ready for a world war."

But among voters who have a definite opinion as to what the future may hold, a majority of nearly 3 to 2 say the Czech settlement has not removed the possibility of war. This sentiment, which is also said to be growing in the capitals of Europe, was reflected in such comments as "Hitler won't be satisfied," and "He's puffed up with success and will want more."

Comptroller Plans Richmond Office

The Office of Comptroller of the Currency has decided to establish a regional office at Richmond to give William P. Folger, chief national bank examiner, more time to devote to national bank supervision throughout the country, it was learned Monday.

Some of the work Folger has performed heretofore will be handled at the Richmond office.

U. S. May Rebuild Silver Spring Culvert

The office of Senator Millard E. Tydings announced last night the Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture, was prepared to consider the use of public funds in rebuilding the Silver Spring, Md., underpass.

The narrow underpass carries Georgia avenue under the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. Senator Tydings asked the bureau to consider the matter, and it reported that a central pillar dividing traffic lanes was "hazardous." The bureau added that the State Roads Commission would have to ask for the reconstruction.

150,000 Children On Security Rolls

Approximately 150,000 Social Security account numbers have been assigned to boys and girls under 16 years of age but this is no proof of their employability under child labor regulations, field offices of the Social Security Board have been instructed by John J. Corson, director of the bureau of old-age insurance.

With the wage and hour law going into effect October 24, Corson said, it is particularly important to clarify for employers questions regarding employment of children holding account numbers.

Account numbers are assigned upon application, regardless of age, Corson emphasized.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

Vandenberg For 2-Price Crop System

Would Export Surplus
Favors Farmer Control
Talks to Kansas G. O. P.

By the Associated Press.

Wichita, Kans., Oct. 11.—Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, advocated tonight a two-price system for American agriculture—"an American price for American consumption and the world price for unrestricted surplus."

Vandenberg, considered a Republican Presidential possibility in 1940, said in an address prepared for a Republican rally, the American farmer is entitled to "complete and noncompetitive control of domestic consumption.

"The starting point, to deal with the farm problem, is less the size of the crop than the assurance that the portion intended for domestic consumption shall be sold at an American price, commensurate with other American prices, and not under pressure of foreign competition and world prices."

Favors Two-Price System

With the American farmer given the domestic market, he said, "we may then hope to develop the two-price system for agriculture."

Admitting there are "many favorable features of the existing law" Senator Vandenberg said the need is for "open minds in Congress—not closed minds to which only Mr. Henry Wallace and his vast army of policemen hold the key."

He questioned the advisability of a farm program which stressed surplus.

"This everlasting emphasis upon the menace of 'big crops' produces an inevitable psychology which invites depressed prices the moment a big crop is in sight. . . . Yet big crops are not always fatal. Abundance is not yet an automatic sin."

The Michigan Senator reviewed President Roosevelt's court reorganization proposal and said "this raid upon the American system of government was halted by an independent Congress."

Assails "War on Business"

"Thereupon President Roosevelt asked the country to destroy the other and last intrenchment. He asked for his own 'yes men' in the House and Senate. Theirs not to reason why, theirs but to do or die. He is still asking for them today, men . . . responsive to his conception of personal government by executive decree for our United States."

Criticizing concentration of executive authority, he said "if we are to remain a democracy, this is more power than a good man should want or a dangerous man should have."

Vandenberg assailed what he called the Administration "war on business."

"The American system of free enterprise has been throttled in its own house. And that is one of the chief reasons why we still have more than 10,000,000 unemployed," he said.

He called for a stop to "jitterbug arithmetic" and said "you cannot make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, even with the benefit of a fireside chat; and you can't build a solvent prosperity around an insolvent treasury."

Nice Mocks O'Conor Stand On Sales Tax

Cites 'Inconsistency' Enters Prince Georges Shakes Many a Hand

By Edward T. Folliard

Gov. Harry W. Nice, carrying his campaign for re-election into Prince Georges County, told a Republican rally at Hyattsville last night that his Democratic rival, Herbert R. O'Conor, had done an about-face on taxes.

Earlier in the day, at Upper Marlboro, Nice poked fun at O'Conor for the latter's silence on the New Deal, and suggested that his young opponent found silence "politically expedient."

Gov. Nice also predicted that a 2-mile bridge would be built across the Potomac at Morgantown, thereby stirring memories of the "purge" fight against Senator Tydings, in which President Roosevelt promised this bridge to southern Maryland. Roosevelt's candidate, David J. Lewis, lost to Tydings, but Maryland already has benefited to the extent of being assured of a PWA-supported bridge across the Susquehanna at Havre de Grace.

Spoke at Hyattsville

"I've got the money in the bank for the Susquehanna Bridge," Gov. Nice told the crowd at Upper Marlboro, "and it looks like we're going to get the money for the Potomac Bridge."

The Governor, accompanied by the other Republicans on the State ticket, spoke to a crowd of 250 last night in the Masonic Hall at Hyattsville, and was cheered lustily when he predicted victory for himself on November 8.

Quotes News Story

Quoting last night from a newspaper article of April 19, 1937, Nice said that O'Conor then advocated a consumers' sales tax to raise $6,000,000 for a relief program.

He further quoted O'Conor as saying that if the consumers' sales tax should be found undesirable, then the Maryland Legislature should approve a list of alternative taxes, including taxes on cigarettes, beer, whisky, admissions, toilet articles cosmetics and a few other items.

Having contrasted these purported recommendations of O'Conor with O'Conor's promises in southern Maryland last week to oppose cigarette taxes, gross receipts taxes and the like, Gov. Nice said "the jewel of consistency has become somewhat tarnished."

Asks Explanation

"I think it is but fair that I ask my opponent, in view of the inconsistency of the record, to explain just why he has abandoned his policy of 1937 and adopted his policy of 1938.

"Why a sales tax in 1937, and against it in 1938? Why a tax on real estate and against an income tax in 1937, and for an income tax and against a sales tax in 1938?"

Gov. Nice then went on to quote O'Conor as saying in 1937 that Maryland leaders should "rise above personal and political considerations and meet the situation squarely."

O'Conor today is campaigning on a platform that calls for a State income tax ranging from 1 to 6 per cent, with special exemptions for those in the lower brackets.

Nice, who would be the first Republican Governor of Maryland ever to be re-elected should he win on November 8, found himself in strong Democratic territory when he went into Prince Georges County yesterday. It was one of the counties that stuck by the late Albert C. Ritchie in 1934, when Nice defeated Ritchie in the latter's quest of a fifth term.

Jolly, He Beams

Notwithstanding the heavy Democratic atmosphere, however, the jolly, rotund Nice beamed as he traveled up and down the county yesterday and last night, covering more than 200 miles.

He stopped at almost every crossroads store and several times walked into fields and barns to clasp the hands of farmers.

"Do you mind if I shake your hand," he would say, "I'm Harry Nice."

At Upper Marlboro, addressing a crowd of 300 in the court room, he promised to champion the tobacco farmer and he chided O'Conor for the latter's silence on the New Deal.

Praises Sasscer

"A year ago," he said, "I know of no one who was more vocal in support of the New Deal. This year, even the Democratic platform doesn't mention the New Deal. Maybe it's political expediency. I don't know."

Gov. Nice criticized the Democratic Legislature as a whole for thwarting his measures in the last four years, but he spoke highly of Prince Georges' favorite son, Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the State Senate and Democratic leader of the county.

"I'm not waging war on the Democratic Party," Gov. Nice said. "I wouldn't be here if Democratic votes hadn't helped to elect me in 1934. I need these votes."

Other Speakers

Other members of the Republican State slate who spoke were Judge Oscar Leser, candidate for United States Senate; A. Kingsley Love, candidate for Congress from the Fifth District; E. Ray Jones, candidate for clerk of the Court of Appeals, and Dr. William G. Jack, candidate for comptroller.

Gov. Nice and his party arrived at Upper Marlboro at 9 a. m. and were greeted by Frank Small, of Clinton, chairman of the county State central committee.

After a handshaking tour of the town, the party left on their motor trip through the southern end of the county.

Air Carriers Warned On Friday Deadline

Air carriers were warned by the Civil Aeronautics Authority yesterday that October 21 is the deadline for filing applications for certificates of convenience and necessity as required by the new air commerce law.

In view of the importance, an announcement said, applications may be left with the guard at the middle door on the Fourteenth street side of the Commerce Building after the authority's section closes on the afternoon of October 21.

National Housing Officials Meeting Here

Warehouse Union Strikes At D. C. Mill

22 of 39 Walk Out Truckers Also Balk Company 'Surprised'

The first industrial strike in Washington for more than a year was called yesterday at the Wilkins-Rogers Milling Co., 3261 K street northwest, by the Warehouse Union, Local No. 21104, an A. F. of L. affiliate. Twenty-two out of 39 employes walked out at 10:15 a. m., and 12 truck drivers, members of the Teamsters' Union, refused to drive trucks through the picket line thrown around the plant.

H. L. Wilkins, president, and S. H. Rogers, vice president of the company, said the strike took them "totally by surprise." Negotiations had been under way to call on the National Labor Relations Board to conduct a vote among employes to see if a majority desired representation by the Warehouse Union, they said.

E. C. Nagel, business representative of the strikers, said they were protesting wage-hour conditions and that company officials had refused for the past three weeks to recognize the union as a bargaining agency, although 28 of the 39 employes on the floor of the plant had sought union cards.

Several of the strikers had been working as much as 60 hours a week and men with 11 to 12 years' experience in the plant were making $18 a week, Nagel said. The union demands a 44-hour week with a minimum wage of $21 per week for general workers, now making about $16 a week, Nagel asserted.

Wilkins asserted his mill paid higher salaries than any other mill in this area.

Rogers last night said men in the plant worked 7½ hours a day six days a week.

Some tension was evidenced over announcement by Rogers that independent truckers probably will be hired.

New Court Rules Invoked 1st Time In Collier Suit

The difficulty of bringing into court arrowheads, baskets, blankets and 3,000 other exhibits was adduced by John Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, as a reason for attempting to simplify proceedings in Frederick G. Collet's $200,000 libel suit against him.

Hoping to get the issues down to something easier to handle than is promised by the 100 thick depositions already on file with the district clerk, Collier's counsel, Herbert S. Ward, invoked the new Federal court rules for the first time in the District. Ward moved that the District court apply to the Collet libel suit Rule 16, which provided for an informal preliminary hearing of the issues.

Collet is executive secretary of the Indians of California, Inc., with offices in San Francisco. He sued Collier for $200,000 damages and claimed that Collier wronged him in testimony before the House Indian Affairs Committee and in statements published in Indians at Work, a journal of the Department of Interior. The Indians quit supporting him, Collet said, as a result of Collier's declarations.

Suit to Be Heard On 20,000,000 Cuba Coins Today

The Government's claim that Cuba is a sovereign state and cannot be sued directly or indirectly will be heard today by Justice O'Donoghue in arguments over an effort to attach 20,000,000 coins belonging to the island authorities.

Justice O'Donoghue late yesterday ordered immediate hearing of the application of Compania Reparto Alturas de Universidad for an injunction to forbid Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the mint, from parting with the coins and the silver and nickel of which they are being made in the Philadelphia mint.

The Compania Reparto, an Havana firm, claims Cuba owes it $231,240 for confiscated property. Mrs. Ross recently pleaded that District court lacks jurisdiction over the coins because they have never been in the District.

City Dwellers' Homes Held Better Off Than on Farms

Alexander Expresses Surprise at Plight Housing Group Hears Average Cost Is $650 Tenant Value Listed at $350

Elimination of rural slums that are below the standard for quarters which the English and Danes provide for their pigs should be the next low-cost housing objective of this country, Dr. W. W. Alexander, administrator of the Farm Security Administration, told the National Association of Housing Officials at Wardman Park Hotel.

Expressing surprise that Congress had overlooked the plight of poverty-stricken farmers in enacting low-cost housing legislation, Dr. Alexander said that a "larger proportion of the farm than the city population is living in overcrowded, insanitary homes; and, from the standpoint of mere shelter from rain and cold, city slum dwellers often are better off than thousands of relatively prosperous farm families."

Dr. Alexander said the FSA had made only a "modest" beginning in the field of low-cost housing for rural populations but had succeeded in producing four and five room houses at $1,100 each through use of prefabricated materials.

"You city people probably would turn up your noses at $1,100 houses," he added, "but these homes are a distinct improvement on the average rural home of today."

The average value of farm homes in 14 Southern States, he said, is $650, and $350 for tenant farmers' houses. He added, however, that the rural slum problem is not confined to the South.

Many of these rural slum dwellings, he said, not only have none of the modern plumbing and lighting conveniences but lack even the most ordinary housing facilities.

"Throughout wide areas, screens and sometimes window panes are unknown," he said.

"Under these conditions it is hardly surprising that the typical 'rural diseases'—malaria, hookworm from polluted soil and typhoid from contaminated wells—have become widespread."

Dr. Alexander was one of the speakers in a panel that included all Federal administrators charged with various low-cost housing activities of the United States Government.

More than a hundred delegates from State, local and national housing authorities were in attendance for a convention that will continue through Friday.

Nathan Straus, administrator of the U. S. Housing Authority, and John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority, were on the same panel, but neither was present when the other spoke. At odds over the local ADA applicationfi they shook hands on the platform but engaged in no conversation.

Both described the work of their respective organizations but carefully evaded the controversy over whether a Federal subsidy is essential for a successful low-cost housing development.

During the past year, Ihlder said, the ADA completed two projects—one a group of 16 one-family houses for white occupancy, the other an apartment house for 24 colored families. The ADA also has erected 18 one-family houses for colored occupancy that are nearing completion.

"Like all landlords," he observed, "we have our rent troubles, but at the present time all except eight who have been arrears are paying their back rent by installments."

Five projects will be started, he said, as soon as the USHA makes a $10,614,021 loan. Three will replace slum areas, while two will be on what is now vacant land. Two are for white occupancy and three for colored tenants.

Straus cited the record USHA for its one year operation and predicted an average of 5,000 new dwelling units will get under construction every month during the next year.

Commitments by the USHA to date amount to $373,723,000 for 142 cities in 27 States and the District of Columbia. Loan contracts amounting to $202,807,000 for 81 projects in 19 States have been approved by the President, but only $7,545,892 have been advanced under these contracts to 28 local authorities.

Construction costs of the two contracts let to date in New York City and Buffalo, he said, have fallen below the $1,250 per room limit. The New York cost is $911 per room and that in Buffalo $946.

Estimated rentals range from $2 to $5.18 a room, he said, with the median at $4.14.

Like Dr. Alexander, John H. Fahey, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, stressed the need for low-cost housing developments in rural areas, especially in small towns.

Small homes should be built for $4,000 or less for these communities, he said.

"While I am aware that progress has been made in better planning," he said, "it cannot be claimed that we have yet found the way to provide for $4,000 and less the kind of homes the American family of moderate income is entitled to have. The market for such homes is enormous, and the sooner we begin to meet that demand the better it will be for the business of the entire country."

Stewart McDonald, Federal housing administrator, described the activities of the FHA in encouraging private industry to build and banks to lend on small investments. He declared that the FHA also had sreved to raise the standards of private construction.

"For the first time," he said, "the individual buyer is protected against jerry building, against adverse neighborhood influences, against over-buying, and particularly against the evils of burdensome financing."

McDonald described as "gratifying" the loss record of the FHA. As of October 1, he said, out of a total insurance business of more than $1,200,000,000, only 331 properties have been taken over wiht losses on those sold of less than $70,000.

Rear Admiral C. J. Peoples, chairman of the central housing committee, also recited the activities of his group.

Sunday Beer Ban Action Rescinded By Spotsylvania

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—The Spotsylvania County board of supervisors today reversed by a vote of 3 to 1 a previous action banning the Sunday sale of beer and wine.

The board's ban on Sunday sales was voted unanimously by the board. Today's action would make no change in present regulations which permit alcoholic beverages to be dispensed seven days a week.

Supreme Court Hears Charge Of NLRB Bias

A. F. L. Cites Decisions Hits N. Y. Settlement Resents 'Umpiring'

By the Associated Press.

The American Federation of Labor told the Supreme Court yesterday that the National Labor Relations Board "has brazenly and by official act declared itself as a proponent of the C. I. O."

This statement was made in a brief filed with the tribunal attacking the validity of a Labor Board order directing the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York to abrogate a collective bargaining agreement with a federation affiliate. The court will hear oral argument of the case late this week.

Claim Most Members

The order, which was issued upon a complaint by the United Electrical and Radio Workers of America (C. I. O.) directed Consolidated Edison to cease recognition of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (A. F. of L.) and to reinstate six men found to have been dismissed for activity on behalf of the C. I. O. affiliate.

Challenging this action, the brief contended that 30,000 of the 38,000 Consolidated Edison employes belonged to the Federation and that it was entitled to represent the men in collective bargaining.

"Is co-operation between employer and labor to be outlawed and the relationship of enmity to be fostered?" the brief asked. "Such is evidently the board's construction of the purpose of the act."

The brief contended, too, that the Labor Board should not take jurisdiction when the States have labor relations acts. Pointing out that New York has such an act, the Federation said:

"Where States have jurisdiction in administrative matters affecting labor relations, we desire the State administrative agencies to exercise the jurisdiction. We desire it even to the exclusion of Federal agencies."

Oppose Inter-Union Umpiring

The brief said that in recent months "it has become necessary" for the federation to "criticize certain aspects" in the administration of the labor relations act and added:

"In the case before the court there are involved a number of these criticism-compelling practices. Foremost are these:

"The failure of the National Labor Relations Board to join (include) labor organizations as parties to proceedings in which it is contemplated that contracts of these labor organizations will be adversely affected.

"The assertion by the board of the right to enter orders nullifying collective bargaining contracts of national labor organizations when no question of domination by the employer is involved, and the organization does not seek exclusive representation.

"The practice of the board of prohibiting any expression by any employer or by minor supervisory employes of sympathy with or preference for the aims or ideals of national labor organizations in contravention of the right of free speech under penalty of invalidating contracts entered into in good faith.

"There are practices which have within the recent past adversely affected affiliates of the American Federation of Labor. A broad tendency for them to recur with expanding force can be noticed today."

Lewis Spent $613 In Washington County

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Oct. 11.—Representative David J. Lewis spent $613.30 in Washington County, which he carried in his unsuccessful campaign for the United States Senate nomination, a report of Sharpe D. Karper, treasurer of the Lewis-for-Senator Club, filed yesterday shows.

Justices Query Both Counsel in Brunswick Suit

Counsel for William W. Brunswick struggled in the District Court of Appeals yesterday for Brunswick's right to collect both his $1,623.12 foreign service retirement pay and his $1,620 salary as a Resettlement Administration unclassified employe.

Justices Vinson, Miller and Edgerton repeatedly and sharply questioned counsel for both sides.

Brunswick retired in 1934 from a $3,500 post in the Foreign Service, in which he had been since 1907. He worked briefly for the National Emergency Council and in 1936 joined the Resettlement Administration as a fiscal accounting worker.

This came to the attention of R. N. Elliott, acting comptroller general, who ordered Brunswick's retirement pay stopped. Elliott also directed refund of $973.88 in pensions paid to Brunswick while he was working for the NEC and RA. Brunswick sued to restrain this collection and to have his pension resumed, and Justice Gordon dismissed the action.

Maurice Lynch, Winchester Bar Dean, Is Feted

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 11.—Eighty-four-year-old Maurice M. Lynch, dean of the Winchester bar, was feted tonight by his friends who gathered at the George Washington Hotel for a testimonial dinner.

J. Merle Thorpe, editor of The Nation's Business, was the principal speaker. Senator H. F. Byrd paid tribute to Mr. Lynch and R. Gray Williams, prominent attorney, presided.

Despite his years, Mr. Lynch looks after a large practice here. For a number of years, he served as superintendent of schools in Frederick County. He is director of the Farmers & Merchants Bank and is identified with other business interests.

3 Die in Traffic; Hagerstown Maps New Safety Drive

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 11.—City officials called upon the mayor's safety committee to reconvene after three fatal automobile accidents here since Saturday.

The third fatal accident occurred last night on the Middleburg pike, when Marvin E. Stumbaugh, 18, Hagerstown was instantly killed when the car driven by Elmer R. Smith turned over. Smith and Lewis Turner were slightly injured. An inquest will be held later in the week, Acting Coroner C. Edward Heard announced.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict of unavoidable accident in the death of Lawrence L. Leatherman, 18, Leitersburg, who died Saturday night under the wheels of a truck as he lay in the road near his home.

Lewis I. Leitz, 45, died Saturday from injuries received in the collision of a car in which he was a passenger with a trailer truck here. A coroner's jury will meet on the Leitz case tomorrow night.

WHY DIDN'T SOMEONE TELL ME?

FLYING IS SO SMOOTH, SO SERENE, SO GLORIOUS

BY Flagship

★ Day after day we hear first-time fliers say, "I never dreamed flying was like this."

Perhaps we have taken the luxuries and ease of Flagship travel too much for granted. Perhaps people really don't know how grand it is.

To those who think only of incredible speed, the quiet, club-like atmosphere of a Flagship lounge comes as a surprise. It's so roomy and comfortable that you sit back in a luxurious arm chair and read, smoke, take a nap or write a letter with perfect ease. There's a stewardess to bring your favorite magazines and serve you delicious meals—without cost. You may walk about if you wish on a floor that doesn't sway—or just relax and enjoy the vast landscapes steadily passing by below.

Make your next trip by Flagship and be at your destination almost before you know it. Then you'll know how enjoyable modern travel can be.

WASHINGTON To CHICAGO

AND EVERYWHERE WEST

To all the west, "fly American"! Seasoned travelers prefer the convenient schedules and superb service of American Flagships.

American provides the only through service to Chicago with no change of planes. Take the popular Senator at 8:40 a.m. or the President at 4:35 p.m. Both make good connections at Chicago for points northwest and west.

To Los Angeles and the Southwest, American offers the only through Skysleeper service. The Southerner at 10:35 p.m. over the famous Southern All-Year Route reaches Los Angeles at noon next day. Stop over at Memphis, Dallas, Fort Worth, El Paso, Phoenix at no extra cost.

Fares are low—often less than first-class ground travel. To Chicago, only $36. 10% saving on round-trip flights. For complete information and reservations ask your travel agent or phone REpublic 1000. Ticket Office, 815—15th Street, N. W.

President Sees Huge Boost in Navy Budget

$150,000,000 Bigger Hails Chaco Pact Defends Hawaii Costs

By William V. Nessly.

The country's "second-to-none" Navy program will call for an increase of perhaps $150,000,000 or $170,000,000 in the Navy budget for next year, President Roosevelt said yesterday.

Other officials, viewing the continued strife in Europe and the Far steadfast efforts for peace, indicated a belief that the additional sum required for defense purposes will be in the neighborhood of $200,000,000, of which up to $50,000,000 would go to the Army.

Mr. Roosevelt said that the amount mentioned would be required to care for construction work authorized, or on which contracts already have been let or soon will be let.

At the same time, he hailed the settlement of the Chaco dispute between Bolivia and Paraguay, announced Monday, and the fact that this continent continues without war.

Representatives of six American presidents including the United States made an arbitral award by which the boundary between Bolivia and Paraguay, long the cause of bitter warfare, was fixed definitely. The two countries had agreed in advance to accept the award.

Asked whether he saw any parallel between the Chaco boundary settlement and the Munich conference, which avoided war by granting partof Czechoslovakia to Germany, the President smiled but said there would be no comment.

He revealed at his press conference he had overruled protests from Gov. Poindexter, of the Hawaiian Islands, that too large a proportion of WPA money in the islands was being spent for national defense projects. The Governor had wanted more of the emergency funds expended on municipal projects, but the President said he felt the present ratio should be maintained.

The $1,000,000,000 naval expansion bill passed at the last session of Congress to cover a ten-year building program will bring the start of work next year on two new battleships, four cruisers, eight destroyers and a half dozen submarines, under Navy Department plans.

Two Battleships Building

Two new battleships already are under construction, and bids are to be opened on three others October 19. Still another will be built in one of the Navy yards.

In addition to the battleships, Congress authorized two aircraft carriers, nine cruisers, 23 destroyers, 9 submarines, 950 additional naval airplanes to bring the number of useful planes up to 3,000, and 26 auxiliary vessels.

The War and Navy Departments together were voted $1,006,267,748 for military purposes, in addition to the $196,962,867 given for the War Department for nonmilitary work, such as flood control.

Leahy Expects More

The President explained that very little money of the current appropriation would be spent on starting the newl yauthorized vessels, but the letting of contracts this year could put the work well under way by next summer.

Admiral William H. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations, is among those who feel that more than the $150,000,000 increase will be required for the Navy program. The enlisted personnel must be increased to man the new ships already under construction.

The Navy also is expected to ask funds for modernizing or altering five of the present battleships and several submarines.

The War Department wants 2,240 more officers and 15,000 more enlisted men, along with an increase of 5,000 men in the National Guard, and additional airplans, as well.

Bombing Ban Urged

A new suggestion concerning a possible disarmament conference came from an Administration source yesterday when Secretary of War Woodring, at Cherokee, Okla., favored "outlawry of the plane as an instrument of war."

Undersecretary of State Welles last week called for "a new order based on justice and on law" and said there was need for economic and military disarmament, a worldwide ban on air bombing of civilians, and economic restoration.

At Cherokee yesterday, the Associated Press reported, Secretary Woodring said: The world now has reason to hope for agreements assuring peace "for decades ot come."

Squad Cars Round Up Jury Panel

Minneapolis, Oct. 11 (AP).—Deputy sheriffs swooped on 20 downtown pedestrians today, taking them in police squad cars to the courthouse to serve as a jury panel for the trial of Arnold Johnson, charged with slaying Labor Leader William Brown.

Questioning of 70 venire prospects in the last week had produced only eight jurors.

Hundreds of Hungarian flags fluttered along the route. In Ipolysag, a town of 4,000, bugles sounded at noon and Czechoslovak officers went to the international barrier and formally surrendered the town.

The Hungarian force of occupation was estimated at 10,000.

Occupation of the Czechoslovak town of Satoralja Ujhely was completed last night.

Parley Recessed

The Prague government, meanwhile, wrestled with problems arising from German occupation of Sudetenland, particularly the presence in Czechoslovakia of 10,000 refugees from Sudetenland.

The Bohemian provincial government appointed a committee of 10 former residents of Sudetenland to investigate registration lists and determine which refugees could be sent back home without personal danger. The national government's plans for return of many refugees were held in abeyance.

Negotiations at Komarom, on the border, for settlement of Hungary's demands were recessed until tomorrow after a brief afternoon conference which a Prague delegate said ended in deadlock.

It was announced officially, however, that both delegations would present conference data to their governments tonight.

The Hungarians, it was understood, were insistent on cession of territory including the cities of Bratislava, Nitra, Kassa and Ungvar.

Fear was expressed in some quarters that if negotiations should collapse Hungarian troops massed along the border and pictured as eager for acquisition of territory could not be held back for long.

appear. The mass was conducted by his secretary, Mgr. Jakob Weinbacher, who appeared with his hands heavily bandaged. He was one of the two priests injured by being thrown from windows Saturday night when a yelling mob of 5,000 stormed the cardinal's palace shouting "Death to all priests!"

Nazi authorities, under direction of Reich Commissioner Joseph Buerckel, continued a roundup of the ringleaders of Saturday's rioting.

D. N. B. (official news agency) quoted Mayor Neubacher of Vienna as sharply criticizing Cardinal Innitzer in a speech to a Nazi Party group.

The mayor, referring to the Cardinal's statements before a Catholic meeting in the cathedral Friday night which set off the disorders, quoted the prelate as saying that "there still is youth which does not easily lend its ears to misleading words and phrases," referring to the Catholic youth.

"It is regrettable," the mayor said, "that Innitzer did not speak such words at the time when they would have been extremely timely, namely, during the era when a criminal clique of politicians who usurped political power sent courageous people to the gallows while appealing to God."

He referred to the former Austrian regime under Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, now a Nazi prisoner, awaiting trial on treason charges.

The cardinal today appealed to Catholic parents to "rear your children as Christians" in a manifesto shoved under doors and placed in mail boxes, presumably by Catholic volunteer youths.

Holy Land Strife Flames Into War; British Chief Bombed

Palestine

Americans of the Christian and Jewish faiths to avert a decision which according to autheticated reports from London would involve the abndonment by Great Britain of her Jewish national home policy in Palestine and the stoppage of Jewish immigration.

Warn of Surrender

The Christian leaders including representatives of the Catholic and Protestant denominations and noted laymen as well as clergymen emphasized to Prime Minister Chamberlain that the stoppage of Jewish immigration at this time "Would be regarded by the entire world as a surrender to the forces of violence and hatred now sweeping the world; it would be a blow to Christian honor','

Among the signatories to the cabled appeal were former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York; Jeremiah T. Mahoney, the Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of the Christian Herald, and Bishop Ivan Lee Holt, of St. Louis.

The text of the cablegram and the signatories follow:

"We, the undersigned, members of the Christian faith, are profoundly disturbed by reports that the British government is prepared to abandon its pledge to the Jewish people made through the Balfour declaration and embodied in the Palestine mandate, to make possible the establishment of the Jewish national home in Palestine. This responsibility was accepted by Great Britain as a sacred trust in behalf of the Christian world. Hundreds of thousands of Jews now in Palestine have staked their lives and fortunes on their faith in Great Britain. In reliance on British honor, millions of Jews have entrusted the destiny of their people to the British government. Into the foundations of the Jewish national home they have poured blood and treasure, and their magnificent accomplishments, material and spiritual, have won the high regard of the Christian world.

Not only have the Arab people in Palestine greatly benefited by the administration of the mandate, their political, civil and religious rights been fully protected, but they have freely enjoyed all the fruits of Jewish achievement. Today in the hour of their agony, the persecuted victims of blind hate look to Palestine as their chief and almost sole hope. The abandonment by Great Britain of her pledges to the Jewish world would reduce them to despair. In our solemn judgment such a course would be regarded by the entire world as a surrender to the forces of violence and hatred now sweeping the world; it would be a blow to Christian honor, and a most damaging blow to the prestige of Great Britain which holds this honor in her keeping.

White House Queried

"As friends of Great Britain we urge upon her government to safeguard her trust, to hold fast to the mandate and the Balfour Declaration and to lend every assistance to the Jewish people in the task of establishing their homeland in Palestine."

A flood of telegrams urging the Administration to use its good offices to induce Great Britain to uphold the Palestine mandate and the terms of the Balfour declaration poured into the State Department yesterday as officials professed lack of information of the exact intentions of the British government in the situation.

One message sent by the Washington Branch of the American League for Peace and Democracy read:

"The Washington Branch of the American League for Peace and Democracy is deeply concerned by reports of threatened abandonment by Great Britain of Jewish people in Palestine. Such a course would destroy one of the few refuges open to thousands of Jewish victims of Fascist terror and would leave defenseless Jews already settled in Palestine.

"We respectfully urge that you use the prestige and moral influence of the United States to protect the Jewish people and prevent this calamity."

One from Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, ranking Republican member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said:

"Strongly urge Department of State to exert its utmost influence to persuade the British government to uphold Palestine mandate and pledges given in Balfour resolution during World War. As sponsor of the American Zionist resolution which passed Congress in 1923, for a homeland for the Jewish people in Palestine; I urge a special effort at this time by our government not only to make known our attitude to the British government but also to urge that refugees from Germany, Austria and central Europe be permitted to emigrate to Palestine."

Many of the telegrams, came from the group of officials clergymen and educators all of them non-Jewish, who signed an appeal addressed to Christians of all denominations requesting them to intercede with the State Department to prevail upon Great Britain to remove the restrictions on Jews entering Palestine. The appeal was drafted at a recent meeting in New York of the pro-Palestine Federation of America, of which Charles Edward Russell is president.

Italians Gone, Loyalists Push Back Rebels

Capture 2 Hilltops Fight Hand to Hand Foreigners Leaving

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, Oct. 11.—Government armies were reported to be driving down the slopes of the Pandols Mountains tonight, pushing insurgent battle lines back toward Gandesa in heavy fighting.

A surprise attack started the successful offensive, Government dispatches said, carrying their troops into control of two hilltops.

One hill dominates the terrain sloping toward Gandesa, important communications center in eastern Spain and the objective of three months of fighting.

For two weeks government lines had given stiff resistance to repeated attacks which government reports asserted cost Gen. Franco thousands of casualties before the Czechoslovak crisis and inclement weather brought a lull in fighting.

Fight Hand to Hand

The government's offensive, starting late yesterday, sent waves of militiamen under the protection of heavy artillery fire across the Santa Madalena ravine for successdul hand-to-hand fighting.

Government reports said the insurgents recently had withdrawn troops from the Gandesa sector and the remaining skeleton forces there were forced to retreat.

(In Geneva the Spanish government advised the League of Nations it was ready for an international commission to witness the withdrawal of all foreign soldiers fighting with government forces in Spain.

(Three members of the League secretariat left for Perpignan, France, to join representatives of 20 nations who will watch the foreigners depart.)

Italians Ordered Out

The government offensive came as withdrawal of foreign fighters from the Ebro front started. Insurgent reports said large numbers of Italians were being massed in southern Spain for evacuation, the first ordered out being troops who have fought since the civil war started July 18, 1936.

At Burgos the insurgents announced officially today that 12,000 Italian volunteers would be repatriated soon instead of the 10,000 previously estimated.

(One insurgent source had indicated earlier that 18,000 Italians would leave Seville Wednesday.)

Benes Invited To Run for Post At Glasgow U.

By the Associated Press.

Glasgow, Oct. 11.—Eduard Benes, who resigned as President of Czechoslovakia last week, has been invited to be the Scottish Nationalist candidate for the honorary rectorship of Glasgow University, but the Czechoslovakian Legation in London announced that Dr. Benes had "not even considered the invitation yet."

The rectorship is a purely honorary post, carries no salary and entails no residential duties. Scottish University rectorships previously have been held by distinguished foreign statesmen.

At present there are three candidates for the post—Sir Archibald Sinclair, leader of the Liberal opposition in the House of Commons; Sir Henry Lunn, vice president of the League of Nations Union, and Laurence Housman, author and pacifist.

Posters were put up at the meeting, "Vote for Benes, the Man Who Saved the World."

China Decorates Ten Americans

Hankow, China, Oct. 11 (AP).—The Chinese government announced today ten Americans, including Mayor LaGuardia of New York, had received decorations in connection with yesterday's celebration of the twenty-seventh anniversary of the revolution which ended the Manchu dynasty.

Other Americans decorated included President Alexander G. Ruhven of the University of Michigan; President Ernest H. Wilkins of Oberlin College, and John Bassett Moore, authority on international law.

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 11 (AP).—A foreign office spokesman said today the Brazilian Ambassador to Berlin, Jose Moniz de Aragao, had been transferred to the foreign ministry.

The spokesman said the change did not indicate any diplomatic difficulties between the two countries.

Rio de Janeiro sources Friday reported the German government had been asked not to return its ambassador to Brazil, Karl Ritter, at present in Germany.

Little Bobby Meets a New Citizen

Bobby Howard, 4, is just one of the youngsters who like to play around the tall columns of the District Courthouse. Curiosity prompted him to inquire why so many people were leaving the building yesterday and he was told that they were the new American citizens. He had a cheerful "hello" for Hannah Maria Flaherty, 27 (above), who told him she came from County Kerry, Ireland, and had just become a citzen of the United States. "That's swell,' replied Bobby, "I'm an American citizen myself"

French Extend Maginot Line To Pace Hitler

Swiss Corridor Plugged Metz Is Strengthened Belgian Border Ready

By the United Press.

Paris, Oct. 11.—The war office announced tonight plans have been completed for lengthening and bulwarking the $400,000,000 system of French fortifications facing Germany across the Rhine—the so-called "Maginot line."

A possible and tempting corridor for a german invasion of France through neutral Switzerland already has been plugged by extending the Maginot line south past Belfort along the Swiss frontier, officials said.

Important fortifications in the region of Metz now are being strengthened, it was adde, by hasty construction of second and third lines of defense.

The war office revelations were taken as an indirect reply to Reichsfuehrer Hitler's announcement at aarbrucken Sunday that Germany's Siegfried line would be extended to include heavy fortifications in the Saar and Aix la Chapelle sectors.

Corking of the Swiss bottleneck, through which an invading army might have turned the Maginot Line, was done almost secretly.

"The Maginot Line will never be finished," a war office official said. "At present troops from the active army are working along the whole length of the line.

"The sector where work is least advanced—Dunkirk to Montmedy (along the Belgian border)—is already far advanced and can now resist attacks."

49 Renounce 13 Nations to Take U. S. Oath

Forty-nine men and women born under 13 foreign flags passed their final tests before Chief Justice Wheat and were granted American citizenship in District Court yesterday.

Hopeful that she will be given the oath of allegiance soon was Mrs. Emilia Shadid Murray, 41, of 312 Seventeenth street southeast, who must study the Constitution some more.

"I'd rather die than have to tell people I didn't become an American today," Mrs. Murray, a Syrian, told the Chief Justice. She was almost in tears. To her side stepped the Rev. Benjamin T. Hoffiz, in the rich vestments of a priest of the Syrian Orthodox Church.

"She has lived in America 24 years," Father Hoffiz, who is pastor of St. Joseph's Church, told the court. "She spent all she had, $500, on liberty bonds during the war. She will be a good citizen. I beg your honor to give this widowed woman the great joy of going home to her 22-year-old daughter as a fellow citizen of the United States."

The Chief Justice, however, felt that the law did not permit him to waive the examinations. He adjourned hearing on Mrs. Murray's application.

Denied was the application of Edgarton Northey Smith, 25, of 3245 Livingston street, a British subject. Edgar Cole, junior examiner of the Department of Labor, told the court Smith failed to report in his application instances when he was detained by police officers.

John Lentz, 47, of Marine Barracks, New York Navy Yard, hustled out of breath into court as the proceedings were about to end. The long trip from New York almost made him lose his citizenship, he explained, after he swore allegiance.

Admitted to citizenship yesterday were 12 Britons, 7 Russians, 7 Italians, 5 Poles, 4 Germans, 4 Greeks, 2 Turks, 2 Austrians and 1 each of Swiss, Norwegian, Spanish, French, Syrian and Filipino birth.

Lewis Offers To Resign if Green Will

Lewis

directed at me, but because the whole incident brings further confusion and greater strife into the labor movement."

Gravely he said:

"There may be some virtue behind the suggestion of the A. F. of L. that I personally retire from official participation in the matter. Obviously the C. I. O. could function without the benefit of my services and conceivably with increased efficiency.

"The same suggestion would apply to Mr. Green whose recent ferocity seems to know no bounds.

"In any event I think it worth trying. I advise that I am willing to resign tomorrow or any day thereafter as chairman of the C. I. O. if Mr. Green will simultaneously resign as president of the A. F. of L.

"It then may be possible for the remaining leaders of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. to conclude a peace pact, in which event the contribution of Mr. Green and myself would be of some value.

Peace Predicted

Arthur O. Wharton, an A. F. of L. vice president, a long-time foe of Lewis, commented at once: "I doubt his sincerity."

But Alexander F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, an independent, nonpartial labor group, predicted at once that the civil war in labor would end within a year because "the interests of labor and the public demand it."

C. I. O. 3 Years Old

Particular drama inhered in Lewis' gesture, as it will be three years this Saturday since Lewis and the "rebel unions" decided to revolt from the federation after the latter body had refused to indorse the unionization of the millions of nonunion industrial workers who are not craft workers. It was on November 2, 1935 that Lewis and seven other chieftains announced formation of the C. I. O., which now claims 4,000,000 members, approximately as many as the A. F. of L.

Lewis' statement contained an indorsement of the suggestion of Heywood Broun, president American Newspaper Guild, a C. I. O. unit, that President Roosevent appoint a commission to investigate American labor, to round out the studies made by a former commission of British and Swedish labor organization.

A further labor development yesterday arose in the suggestion of Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, that an agency of the Government be established to serve as Federal conciliator in industrial matters. He intends to offer the idea to the President later this week.

Luray Principal Quits to Become A Carillonneur

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., Oct. 11.—Effective the end of this school term, Charles Chapman announced today that he will resign as principal of Luray High School. He also revealed that he has signed a five-year contract, beginning November 1, 1939, as full-time carillonneur for the Belle Brown Northcott Memorial Tower at Luray.

Mr. Chapman, 33, has acted as carillonneur of singing tower for past year. The tower was donated to Luray by Col. T. C. Northcott and endowed by him with $80,000 for upkeep and employment of a carillonneur. The Luray Park Board is trustee of the tower.

Mr. Chapman has been a principal here for the past eight years. He studied music at the University of Virginia and the Peabody Conservatory of Music at Baltimore. Anton Brees, of Bok Tower, Fla., and Byron Parker, of Mercersburg, Pa., were his carillon instructors.

Month's Gold Imports Set New Record

The Commerce Department said yesterday that September gold imports into the United States set a record at $520,907,282. Previously, the largest imports for one month were $452,000,000 in February, 1934.

Last month's influx was attributed to the rush of European bankers and businessmen to send money here for safekeeping because of the threat of war. From England lone, $377,936,236 worth of gold came here. Other shipments included $47,219,393 from the Netherlands, $11,520,510 from Sweden, $38,156,404 from Canada, $1,446,395 from Mexico, $1,535,511 from Hongkong, $35,095,411 from Japan and $3,775,267 from Australia.

September silver imports also were somewhat larger than usual. They amounted to $24,097,500.

Hague Orders Jersey City To Back New Deal's Nominee

formally opening the Jersey campaign. Mayor Hague himself will appear on the platform with Ely, as will Senator Milton, retiring from the Senate, and former Senator Moore, both loyal Hague men. Ward leaders will head Ely parades to the armory, where an attendance of 50,000 is being press agented. It will be "Ely night" in Jersey City. Hague's orders. Going to town.

Campaigns as Liberal

The phrase was repeated by Donal C. Fox, who is managing Ely's campaign, and says he will "pin Barbour's ears back." He has been stumping Republican strongholds in south Jersey counties with his candidate, attacking his opponent as a "reactionary." The issue, Ely says, is the New Deal and maintenance of "liberal" government. Barbour replies that he is the more liberal of the two, and voted in the Senate for salient New Deal measures.

After opening his campaign with an attack on Mayor Hague and the suppression of free speech in Jersey City, Barbour has soft-pedaled that issue. He has turned his fire on alleged coercing and intimidating of WPA voters. On the basis of letters to employes from county Democratic leaders, last week Barbour asked for and obtained a Sheppard committee investigation.

Ely, who was formerly State WPA admistrator, flatly denied the charges and told WPA workers in a statement they were free to vote as they chose. He countered with a demand that the Sheppard committee investigate Barbour's campaign expenditures.

May Carry War to Hague

Neither candidate as yet has entered Hague's Jersey City stronghold, although both are scheduled to make several speeches there before the end of the campaign.

Barbour has been advised by some Republicans to press the fight on Hague in his home territory, and the election may turn on his decision. Independent Jersey City Republicans say Barbour to win must repudiate Jersey City Republican leaders who have been "playing ball" with Mayor Hague. They are urging a Barbour attack on Charles Stoebling, a nominal Republican who is Jersey commissioner of registrations and clerk of the election board.

But the 50-year-old, massive Barbour, who was national amateur heavyweight boxing champion in his youth, has shown little willingness to mix it with the Hague organization in this campaign. Aside from his recent WPA assault, he has been busy outlining his record for New Deal support while in the Senate. Among Administration measures he tells the voters he supported were the social security act, the Wagner housing act, the railroad retirement act and the HOLC bill.

The diminutive Ely, who stands only chest high to Barbour, asserts the records don't show Barbour supported the HOLC. He also attacks the former Senator's negative vote on relief appropriations, the SEC act and the public utilities holding company act.

Smathers Aids Ely

Although Ely is running as a Roosevelt liberal, there has been no rush of Administration oratorical talent to New Jersey to support him. Jersey's New Deal Senator Smathers has recently come to his aid. Smathers portrays Ely as a "liberal who is conscious of and responsive to the misfortunes of mankind." Barbour he assails as the representative of "Wall street greed and the Manufacturers Association." Barbour retorts that he is a "liberal and progressive" candidate.

Barbour's Republican State platform has a civil liberties plank. Ely's Democratic platform has none.

The silver-haired Ely, whose large ears and prominent nose are disproportionate to his bantamweight stature, was picked by Hague after a frantic search for a Democratic Senatorial nominee. For awhile, John H. R. Cromwell, husband of Doris Duke, was viewed as the likely Democratic nominee, but Cromwell was reputedly discarded because of his views on birth control and taxation.

Before Ely was appointed State Works Progress administrator he served two terms in the State Legislature from nominally Republican Bergen County, the first Democrat to represent that county for more than a generation. A member of one of New Jersey's oldest families, he resigned from the State Senate in 1934 to take the WPA post, and quit WPA last August to run for the Senate.

Barbour was first appointed to the Senate in 1931 to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Dwight W. Morrow. In 1932 he was elected to serve until 1937. He was defeated by Senator Smathers in the Roosevelt landslide of 1936, but ran 185,000 votes ahead of his ticket.

President Roosevelt revealed that numerous problems still are arising in connection with his executive order which would embrace 81,000 patronage employes within the civil service system.

The President said at his press conference that only yesterday Admiral Wilson Brown, commandant of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, had protested against applying strict civil service regulation to professors at the academy.

Mr. Roosevelt said that since the academies at Annapolis and West Point are primarily colleges, it was felt that selection of their faculties should be kept on approximately the same basis as at other colleges.

No conclusion had been reached on the Annapolis protest, he said.

Boy, 3, Seriously Hurt As Father Backs Car

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 11.—Pinned against the wall of his father's garage while a car was being backed in, Robbie Sloan, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sloan, Douglas avenue, Lonaconing, was seriously injured.

The child had taken a ride with his father and was on the rear seat when Sloan started to back the car into the garage. The boy apparently got out without being noticed by his father and the moving car crushed him against the inside wall. He was unconscious when his father found him.

The thirty-first annual convention of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association will be held at the Willard Hotel November 16-19, President J. Hampton Moore announced yesterday. Development, utility and maintenance of the Atlantic intracoastal waterway will be discussed.

Va. Sheriff Slayer Given Reprieve Until Nov. 25

Richmond, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—Gov. Price late today granted a reprieve until November 25 to George W. Pingley, who was to die in the electric chair Friday for the killing of Frederick County Sheriff J. W. Newcome.

The Governor wished more time to study the history of the case and a petition for commutation of sentence, signed by approximately 570 persons of the Winchester area. Secretary of the Commonwealth Raymond Jackson said two of the signers were brothers of the sheriff, who was killed February 13 when he went to Pingley's home to serve a warrant.

The mountainland farmer's petition for a writ of error was denied by the Virginia Supreme Court on October 5. The full record of the case, together with the plea for clemency, was laid before the Governor several days ago, but he has been occupied with other matters since then.

U. S. Awards $61,100,000 To Pa. Toll Superhighway

Road

Gov. George H. Earle, Democratic candidate for the Senate seat, Davis has joined James in attacks on Earle's Harrisburg administration, now under investigation, and in charging political use of relief funds.

Arrangements for the new superhighway were completed over the opposition of Roy Greene, of Pittsburgh, who had petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission to build a high-sped diesel and freight railroad over the same route. Greene's petition was turned down by the ICC October 1, commenting that Greene "is opposed to the toll highway and his interest in the railroad appears to be influenced partially by his attitude toward the highway construction."

Several weeks ago Public Works Administrator Ickes announced the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission's application for a $26,000,000 grant had been approved.

Follows Railroad Bed

Yesterday Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the RFC in Washington said his agency agreed to purchase $35,000,000 of 3¾ per cent 30-year Commonwealth of Pennsylvania revenue bonds, completing arrangements for financing the project.

RFC Chairman Jones said his agency bought the issue on a 4¼ per cent yield basis and has sold $10,000,000 of the bonds to B. J. Van Ingen & Co., Inc., of New York, at 95½ per cent and interest.

Following the bed of a railroad started by the Vanderbilts a half century ago, the new highway will use many of the tunnels bored for the railroad venture, cutting with slight grade through the mountains. Ultimately the road would be turned back by the commission to the State system.

The announcement was expected to be seized on by Republican candidates as another indication of Earle-Jones aid from Washington.

Farley to Speak...

Meanwhile, Chairman Farley, of the Democratic committee, is expected to enter Pennsylvania next week in support of the straight Democratic ticket. He will be principal speaker at the $100-a-plate dinner in Philadelphia October 20, when State Democratic organizations will seek to raise $200,000 to replenish depleted campaign coffers.

The President, who last week received Pennsylvania Democratic candidates at Hyde Park, has indicated he will not speak in the State, but Senate Majority Leader Barkley will follow Farley on October 29 with a speech at a Pittsburgh rally. Other Administration leaders expected to campaign for Pennsylvania's Democratic candidates include Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Attorney General Cummings.

Voters Disapprove Duff Cooper Stand

London, Oct. 11 (AP).—Alfred Duff Cooper, who resigned as first lord of the admiralty because he disagreed with Prime Minister Chamberlain's peace of Munich policy, discovered today some of his constituents did not approve his action.

A committee of his electors announced it was in "complete agreement with the actions of the premier and the policy of the government," but deferred decision as to whether to accept Duff Cooper as its candidate in the next general election.

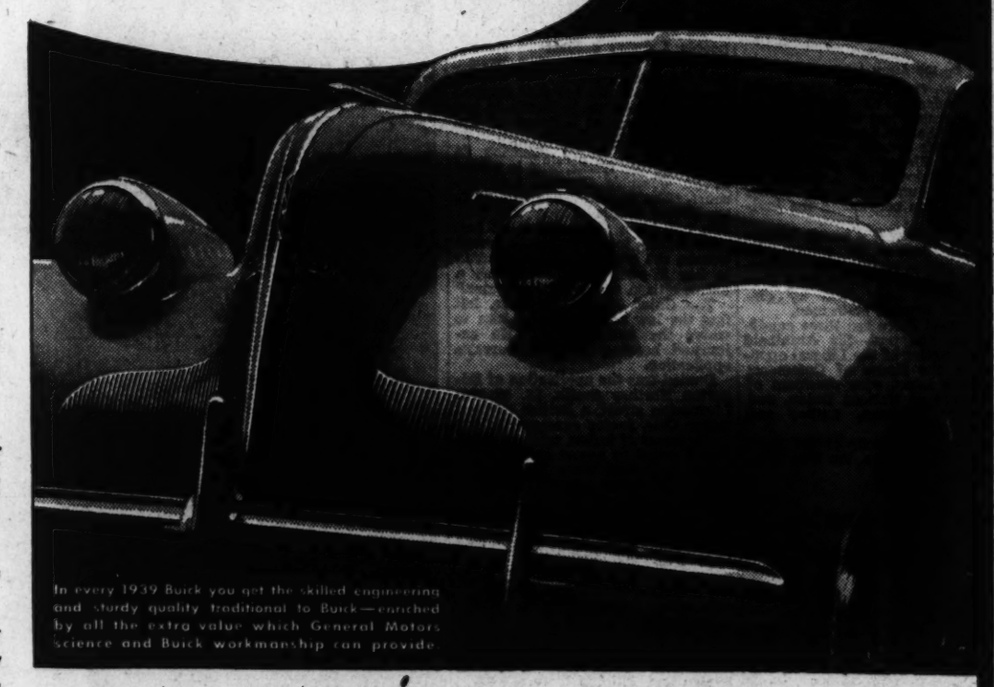
It looks like Five Years from Now!



In every 1939 Buick you get the skilled engineering and sturdy quality traditional to Buick—enriched by all the extra value which General Motors science and Buick workmanship can provide

THE vast Buick factory is a grand place to visit, these days.

Down the roaring aisles, throughout the sprawling bays there's an electric something in the air, a sense of great things happening.

You can see it—in the alert intensity of men, in the pace of the thundering machines, even in the way the hand-trucks roll.

And they're saying—"looks fine for '39!"

They'll point to a sparkling new car inching down the assembly line—a car so different it makes you stop short, look long.

It looks like five years from now, they'll say of this dazzling 1939 Buick, and they're not talking of appearance only.

They're talking of "catwalk-cooling" that floods air under forced draft to ease the temperature of your engine.

They're talking of that Dynaflash great eight engine, instant with life and wringing good from every drop of fuel.

They're talking of weight-balance and gravity-center that hold you to your line—of wheels that camber to let you take the curves more safely—of new visibility—up to 413 square inches more glass in SPECIAL and CENTURY models.

They're talking a thousand and one details of Buick that you'll never know nor need to know but that to their schooled eyes spell a better built automobile.

And they're thinking of now as they talk.

For they know that no car sells spectacularly when it's merely up-to-date. They know that for big years a car has to be ahead—that a car which looks like the future means better times for today.

When you do see it, think of what the men who built it are saying, not boastfully, but with quiet sureness.

They know. You spot that in their glance.

It's a level glance—lighted by that spark you see only in the eyes of confident men!

Nice to Tour Montgomery County Today

Democrats Claim Unity Split Campaign Group 100 Workers Announced

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Gov. Harry W. Nice, Republican candidate for re-election, will make an intensive tour of Montgomery County today while Democrats claim that the county's Democracy is the most harmonious it has been in years.

Leaders of all factions of the Democratic Party joined in a meeting held last night at the Glenmont School, while Independent and Organization candidates and leaders were named equally on a campaign committee which numbers 100.

Lacy Shaw, Organization, and James H. Pugh, Independent, have been named joint chairmen of the Democratic campaign committee. They announced the appointment of the 100 members yesterday.

Dine in Gaithersburg

Gov. Nice will be accompanied by other State candidates and Republican county candidates in his tour of the county today. He will arrive at Rockville at 9:30 a. m., where he will be met by a motorcade of county Republicans.

The motorcade then will proceed to Sandy Spring at 10:15 a. m.; Laytonsville at 10:25 a. m.; Damascus at 11:05 a. m.; Clarksburg, 11:55 a. m.; and at 12:30 p. m., will arrive at Gaithersburg, where a luncheon will be served in the Masonic Temple.

The party will return to Rockville at 2:15 p. m. and then will visit Kensington, Bethesda, Chevy Chase, Silver Spring and Takoma Park, arriving there shortly before 4 p. m. for a parade on Carroll avenue, past the Washington Missionary College and thence by way of Flower and Carroll avenues to Denwood and Philadelphia avenues.

The State and county candidates will join in a Republican rally at 8 p. m. at the National Guard Armory at Silver Spring.

Democrats Plan Rallies

Republicans of the Takoma Park section will meet tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Masonic Temple at Takoma Park to plan the campaign.

Republicans of the Bethesda election district will meet Friday at the home of Capt. Chester Wells, Republican candidate for county commissioner, 9320 Jones Mill road, North Chevy Chase, Md., to organize a Seventh District Republican Club, modeled after the Thirteenth District Republican Club which has had a major part in planning the campaign this year.

Democrats are planning rallies at 8 p. m., October 22, at the Leland Junior High School in Chevy Chase and the National Guard Armory at Silver Spring, at which Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, Democratic candidate for Governor, and other members of the State and county Democratic tickets will speak.

Workers Announced

Plans are being discussed for a rally at 2 p. m. the same afternoon at Rockville High School, but this has not been decided upon definitely, leaders said yesterday.

Members of the Democratic workers' committee announced yesterday by Pugh and Shaw are:

Checks to Be Checked

Methods of paying released prisoners at the Rockville Jail have been ordered changed drastically as the result of the experience of Ralph Griggs, 27, of Winston-Salem, N. C., yesterday.

Griggs, arrested on a charge of vagrancy and ordered to pay a fine of $25 or serve 30 days on the county roads, served the sentence. When released Monday he was entitled to $10.38, or 75 cents a day for his work on the roads. He went to collect his check from the clerk of the county commissioner's office and found that someone had received his check for him.

The commissioners ordered the original check payment stopped and issued a second check for Griggs. The check was cashed and Griggs left.

As a consequence, the warden will be required to issue the checks to the prisoners or go to the office of the county commissioners to identify the prisoner. The custom formerly was to issue the check and have the warden identify the prisoner to the county treasurer for payment.

Price Forest Warden

Kinsmans in New Precinct

For the first time in 52 years no Kinsman will vote in the general election at the First Precinct of the Wheaton District. The sisters Kinsman, members of an old pioneer family, were transferred to the new Eleventh Precinct of the same district in the general registration yesterday. It was the last chance for voters to get on the books for the general election and a large number took advantage of the opportunity.

Legion Auxiliary Elects

Officers of Cissel-Saxon unit, American Legion Auxiliary, were elected last night at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Lauman T. Faulconer, Silver Spring, as follows: President, Mrs. Eugene Lincoln, Takoma Park; vice president, Mrs. H. S. Giusta, Silver Spring; secretary, Mrs. Margaret Neumann, Silver Spring; treasurer, Mrs. F. Paul Clark, Silver Spring; historian, Mrs. George A. Hood, South Woodside Park; chaplain, Mrs. Benjamin Hardesty, Silver Spring, and sergeant-at-arms, Mrs. J. M. Buffin, North Chevy Chase. Plans were made to furnish refreshments at a meeting tonight at the East Silver Spring School under auspices of Cissel-Saxon Post. The post will present awards to the members of the baseball teams it sponsored during the past season.

Four Corners Body Meets

Four Corners Citizens Association will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in the Sunday school room of the Four Corners M. E. Church. The association will act on a proposed ordinance to bar walkathons and dance marathons in the county and elect delegates and alternates to the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

Bishop Freeman to Visit

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman will visit Silver Spring today as honor guest at a luncheon at St. Mary's Church at Aspen, and later attend a meeting of the Northern Convocation of the Washington diocese at Grace Church. The convocation will hold both afternoon and evening meetings with the Rev. Richard Aselford, rector of the church and dean of the convocation, presiding.

Mrs. Magie Rites Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Agnes Magie, widow of Edward R. Magie, who died Monday at her home near Alta Vista, following a long illness, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today from the funeral home of W. Reuban Pumphrey, Bethesda, burial to be in Rock Creek Cemetery. The Rev. John L. Parlies, pastor of Bethesda Presbyterian Church, will officiate.

Mrs. Magie, a native of Washington, had lived in the Bethesda neighborhood about 30 years. She is survived by a stepdaughter, Miss Hazel Magie, Bethesda, and a brother, Robert Raines, Washington.

K. of C. Installs Officers

Man Confesses Hit-Run Deaths Of Two Youths

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hancock, Md., Oct. 11.—Trooper A. W. Achenbach of the Pennsylvania State police announced that Harry Hendershot, of near McConnellsburg, has confessed that he was the driver of the car which Sunday night struck and instantly killed Harry Gordon, 16, and Lemuel Thaux, 15, as they walked along a mountain road between here and McConnellsburg. The officers trailed the car by the tire tread. An 8-year-old son of Hendershot told police that "daddy did it."

Hendershot is being held for court on charges of involuntary manslaughter and leaving the scene of an accident without giving aid.

Fairfax Chief Of Chest Picks 9 Unit Heads

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST, P. O. BOX 245, Fairfax, Va. Phone Falls Church 2088-M.

Beverly Coleman, Fairfax County Community Chest chairman, has named nine division chairmen for the November drive:

Division 1, Dr. E. C. Shull, Herndon; Division 2, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, McLean; Division 3, J. Craig Hunter, Vienna; Division 4, Lennig Sweet, Fairfax; Division 5, A. P. Grow, Falls Church; Division 6, Mrs. Alexander Zabriskie, Seminary Hill; Division 7, Mrs. Helen E. Buckley, Centerville District; Division 8, Mrs. Ray Huff, Lorton; Division 9, Robert Norman, Mount Vernon District.

The budget for 1939 totals $15,250 as against $12,700 for this year and receipts of $11,300.

The budget for venereal disease control was increased from $3,000 to $3,500; maternal and infant welfare from $2,000 to $2,500; general welfare, hospitalization, rehabilitation from $2,000 to $5,000; summer camps from $1,500 to $2,000; 4-H clubs from $300 to $500. The allotment of $1,500 for a juvenile worker was decreased to $750 with the expectation the county supervisors will provide the balance. The $1,000 to aid Boy Scouts was unchanged.

While the amount to be raised this year is increased, the quota assigned by the Washington Chest, to be raised locally, is slightly less than the $8,000 quota of last year. Fairfax County was the only suburban county in the Washington District which raised more than its quota.

24 Clubs Send Women to Arlington

Meet at Country Club Mrs. W.G. Watt Presides 14th Annual Meeting

Arlington County Bureau of The Post, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0309.

Delegates representing 24 woman's clubs in the Fourth Virginia District held their fourteenth annual meeting at the Washington Golf and Country Club yesterday. Mrs. William G. Watt, president, was in charge.

The morning session opened with an invocation by Mrs. Robert Livingston, followed by an address of welcome by Mrs. Ira Gabrielson, president of the Lyon Village club.

Miss Lucille Bland, president of the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke on "Look to the Work the Times Reveal." Other speakers were Mrs. R. G. Boatwright, "Club Extension Work," and Mrs. Ray D. Whitlock, executive State secretary, on "Cancer Control."

At the afternoon session there was joint meeting with the junior members, addressed by Mrs. Beauford Mauck.

The meeting adjourned following reports from the district chairman, club presidents, and secretary and treasurer.

Delegates were from Alexandria, Manassas, Fredericksburg, Herndon, Falls Church, Luray, Orange and Arlington County.

Young Democrats Meet

The Young Democratic Club of Arlington County, meeting last night at Lee Tavern, Glebe road, accepted recommendations favoring stagger terms of office for county board members made by its special committee headed by J. Maynard Magruder.

A referendum on the proposal will be held at the November election. The organization offered its aid to all civic bodies in the county in an effort to have sidewalks laid by the county to all school buildings.

Merchants Invited

Following a general discussion by the board of directors of Arlington Chamber of Commerce at its meeting yesterday, Fritz E. Westenberger, chairman of the retail merchants committee, announced a meeting of his committee October 18, to which all retail merchant members of the chamber have been invited to discuss their problems.

To Give Pupils Tests

Dr. Ralph Beachley, county health officer, announced yesterday that beginning Monday the Schick test will be given in all county schools to determine which children are susceptible to diphtheria. It will be followed by administration of toxoid to those who react positively.

Mrs. Schaff Rites At Greencastle

Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 11.—Mrs. Catherine Leiter Schaff, 38, wife of Dr. Fred L. Schaff, of Greencastle, west of here, died late Saturday in the Martinsburg, W. Va., hospital following injuries received in an automobile accident at Inwood, near Martinsburg last Thursday.

Funeral services were held today at her Greencastle home, in charge of the Rev. Levi K. Zeigler, pastor of the Waynesboro Church of the Brethern, and burial was made in Cedar Hill Cemetery. She was an only daughter of former Commissioner L. H. Leiter and Mrs. Leiter. Her parents, her husband and two children survive.

Alexandria Council Backs School Loan

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU, 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Temple 3767. Delivery Service, phone Alex. 1400.

Alexandria City council last night authorized a loan of $80,000 to be used as the city's share in the cost of erecting the new $150,000 school building on Cameron Mills road, in the Jefferson Park section. A PWA grant will cover the remainder of the cost.

City Manager Carl Budwesky declared that the city would save $3,000 by having the city engineer's office carry out inspection of the building, instead of bringing in an outside firm.

The council also placed on first reading appropriations of $10,400 to cover improvements in the city hall, and $15,000 for repairs in the city jail.

John Walsh, former general counsel of the Federal Trade Commission and a brother of the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, was the speaker at the Discovery Day banquet of Fitzgerald Council, No. 459, Knights of Columbus, held last night in the George Mason Hotel. He spoke on the principles of the order and the origin of the observance of Discovery Day.

Other speakers were Daniel J. Callahan, supreme treasurer of the Knights of Columbus, who has the distinction of having installed every council except one of the Knights of Columbus, and State Deputy Thomas A. Murphy.

Edward Reed was toastmaster, and the address of welcome was given by Edward T. Lannon, who will be installed this evening as the new grand knight of the local order. The dinner and dance following were attended by a number from Washington and Clarendon.

The regular Columbus Day meeting will be held at 8 o'clock this evening, with the installation of officers, and at 11:15 p. m. Grand Knight Lannon will give a radio address over Station WJSV.

Rotary Women Plan Sale

The Women of Rotary of the Alexandria club will sponsor a rummage sale on Friday at 223 North Payne street for the benefit of the Alexandria Children's Home and Day Nursery, a Rotary Club project.

All members of the families of the local Rotarians are urged to assist with contributions delivered at the home of Mrs. Felix Swope, 126 North Columbus street. Others assisting in the collection of supplies for the sale are Mrs. Ray Brehaut and Mrs. Eugene Simpson.

Visits Schools

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate and secretary, visited the Catholic schools in Alexandria on Monday. He was accompanied on his tour of the local schools by the Very Rev. Thomas A. Rankin, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church.

Dr. Schuman to Talk

Dr. Nathan G. Schuman will address the members of the Jefferson School Parent-Teacher Association at their meeting this afternoon at 3:15 o'clock. This will be the third of the series of health talks before school organizations sponsored by the Alexandria Medical Association.

Fawcett Funeral Today

The funeral of Wallace Hooff Fawcett, city engineer of Bristol, Va., who died suddenly Monday in that city, will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon from St. Paul's Episcopal Church, conducted by the Rev. Ernest A. DeBordenave, rector. Burial will be in St. Paul's Cemetery.

Huff to Address Lions

D. C. Man Free on Bail On Securities Charge

Chambersburg, Pa., Oct. 11.—A reduction in bail from $27,500 to $7,000 affected the release of L. H. Sargett, 33, of Washington, D. C., and George S. Spero, 34, of Indianapolis, Ind., who had been held in the Franklin County jail on charges of violating Sate laws governing the sale of securities and dealing in real estate. Both men waived a hearing and posted bond for court.

An impression of Jim Thompson by James Montgomery Flagg

A Name of Fine Traditions since 1788

IF YOU'LL ask any one of Jim Thompson's* people why his business is so successful, you'll get a reply like this: "The Boss is frank about having things right! He'd rather lose a sale than skimp his service."

"Having things right" is a principle Jim follows in nearly everything he does. He doesn't overeat, overdrink, overplay or overwork. He practices moderation and good taste in whatever he chooses or uses.

To men of such fine discrimination and judgment, the Carstairs family have been furnishing good liquors since Colonial times. The Carstairs Whiskey of today is a blend of several selected whiskies—the youngest of which is 4 years old. Magnificently combined to give you rich, robust flavor, with light body.

*The name "Jim Thompson" is not intended to refer to any specific individual, but merely to a type; the type of "man who cares".

Lewis Offers To Resign if Green Will

Lewis

directed at me, but because the whole incident brings further confusion and greater strife into the labor movement."

Gravely he said:

"There may be some virtue behind the suggestion of the A. F. of L. that I personally retire from official participation in the matter. Obviously the C. I. O. could function without the benefit of my services and conceivably with increased efficiency.

"The same suggestion would apply to Mr. Green whose recent ferocity seems to know no bounds.

"In any event I think it worth trying. I advise that I am willing to resign tomorrow or any day thereafter as chairman of the C. I. O. if Mr. Green will simultaneously resign as president of the A. F. of L.

"It then may be possible for the remaining leaders of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. to conclude a peace pact, in which event the contribution of Mr. Green and myself would be of some value.

Peace Predicted

Arthur O. Wharton, an A. F. of L. vice president, a long-time foe of Lewis, commented at once: "I doubt his sincerity."

But Alexander F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, an independent, nonpartial labor group, predicted at once that the civil war in labor would end within a year because "the interests of labor and the public demand it."

C. I. O. 3 Years Old

Particular drama inhered in Lewis' gesture, as it will be three years this Saturday since Lewis and the "rebel unions" decided to revolt from the federation after the latter body had refused to indorse the unionization of the millions of nonunion industrial workers who are not craft workers. It was on November 2, 1935 that Lewis and seven other chieftains announced formation of the C. I. O., which now claims 4,000,000 members, approximately as many as the A. F. of L.

Lewis' statement contained an indorsement of the suggestion of Heywood Broun, president American Newspaper Guild, a C. I. O. unit, that President Roosevent appoint a commission to investigate American labor, to round out the studies made by a former commission of British and Swedish labor organization.

A further labor development yesterday arose in the suggestion of Senator Claude Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, that an agency of the Government be established to serve as Federal conciliator in industrial matters. He intends to offer the idea to the President later this week.

Luray Principal Quits to Become A Carillonneur

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., Oct. 11.—Effective the end of this school term, Charles Chapman announced today that he will resign as principal of Luray High School. He also revealed that he has signed a five-year contract, beginning November 1, 1939, as full-time carillonneur for the Belle Brown Northcott Memorial Tower at Luray.

Mr. Chapman, 33, has acted as carillonneur of singing tower for past year. The tower was donated to Luray by Col. T. C. Northcott and endowed by him with $80,000 for upkeep and employment of a carillonneur. The Luray Park Board is trustee of the tower.

Mr. Chapman has been a principal here for the past eight years. He studied music at the University of Virginia and the Peabody Conservatory of Music at Baltimore. Anton Brees, of Bok Tower, Fla., and Byron Parker, of Mercersburg, Pa., were his carillon instructors.

Month's Gold Imports Set New Record

The Commerce Department said yesterday that September gold imports into the United States set a record at $520,907,282. Previously, the largest imports for one month were $452,000,000 in February, 1934.

Last month's influx was attributed to the rush of European bankers and businessmen to send money here for safekeeping because of the threat of war. From England lone, $377,[illegible],236 worth of gold came here. Other shipments included $47,219,393 from the Netherlands, $11,520,510 from Sweden, $38,156,404 from Canada, $1,446,395 from Mexico, $1,535,511 from Hongkong, $35,095,411 from Japan and $3,775,267 from Australia.

September silver imports also were somewhat larger than usual. They amounted to $24,097,500.

Hague Orders Jersey City To Back New Deal's Nominee

formally opening the Jersey campaign. Mayor Hague himself will appear on the platform with Ely, as will Senator Milton, retiring from the Senate, and former Senator Moore, both loyal Hague men. Ward leaders will head Ely parades to the armory, where an attendance of 50,000 is being press agented. It will be "Ely night" in Jersey City. Hague's orders. Going to town.

Campaigns as Liberal

The phrase was repeated by Donal C. Fox, who is managing Ely's campaign, and says he will "pin Barbour's ears back." He has been stumping Republican strongholds in south Jersey counties with his candidate, attacking his opponent as a "reactionary." The issue, Ely says, is the New Deal and maintenance of "liberal" government. Barbour replies that he is the more liberal of the two, and voted in the Senate for salient New Deal measures.

After opening his campaign with an attack on Mayor Hague and the suppression of free speech in Jersey City, Barbour has soft-pedaled that issue. He has turned his fire on alleged coercing and intimidating of WPA voters. On the basis of letters to employes from county Democratic leaders, last week Barbour asked for and obtained a Sheppard committee investigation.

Ely, who was formerly State WPA admistrator, flatly denied the charges and told WPA workers in a statement they were free to vote as they chose. He countered with a demand that the Sheppard committee investigate Barbour's campaign expenditures.

May Carry War to Hague

Neither candidate as yet has entered Hague's Jersey City stronghold, although both are scheduled to make several speeches there before the end of the campaign.

Barbour has been advised by some Republicans to press the fight on Hague in his home territory, and the election may turn on his decision. Independent Jersey City Republicans say Barbour to win must repudiate Jersey City Republican leaders who have been "playing ball" with Mayor Hague. They are urging a Barbour attack on Charles Stoebling, a nominal Republican who is Jersey commissioner of registrations and clerk of the election board.

But the 50-year-old, massive Barbour, who was national amateur heavyweight boxing champion in his youth, has shown little willingness to mix it with the Hague organization in this campaign. Aside from his recent WPA assault, he has been busy outlining his record for New Deal support while in the Senate. Among Administration measures he tells the voters he supported were the social security act, the Wagner housing act, the railroad retirement act and the HOLC bill.

The diminutive Ely, who stands only chest high to Barbour, asserts the records don't show Barbour supported the HOLC. He also attacks the former Senator's negative vote on relief appropriations, the SEC act and the public utilities holding company act.

Smathers Aids Ely

Although Ely is running as a Roosevelt liberal, there has been no rush of Administration oratorical talent to New Jersey to support him. Jersey's New Deal Senator Smathers has recently come to his aid. Smathers portrays Ely as a "liberal who is conscious of and responsive to the misfortunes of mankind." Barbour he assails as the representative of "Wall street greed and the Manufacturers Association." Barbour retorts that he is a "liberal and progressive" candidate.

Barbour's Republican State platform has a civil liberties plank. Ely's Democratic platform has none.

The silver-haired Ely, whose large ears and prominent nose are disproportionate to his bantamweight stature, was picked by Hague after a frantic search for a Democratic Senatorial nominee. For awhile, John H. R. Cromwell, husband of Doris Duke, was viewed as the likely Democratic nominee, but Cromwell was reputedly discarded because of his views on birth control and taxation.

Before Ely was appointed State Works Progress administrator he served two terms in the State Legislature from nominally Republican Bergen County, the first Democrat to represent that county for more than a generation. A member of one of New Jersey's oldest families, he resigned from the State Senate in 1934 to take the WPA post, and quit WPA last August to run for the Senate.

Barbour was first appointed to the Senate in 1931 to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Dwight W. Morrow. In 1932 he was elected to serve until 1937. He was defeated by Senator Smathers in the Roosevelt landslide of 1936, but ran 185,000 votes ahead of his ticket.

President Roosevelt revealed that numerous problems still are arising in connection with his executive order which would embrace 81,000 patronage employes within the civil service system.

The President said at his press conference that only yesterday Admiral Wilson Brown, commandant of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, had protested against applying strict civil service regulation to professors at the academy.

Mr. Roosevelt said that since the academies at Annapolis and West Point are primarily colleges, it was felt that selection of their faculties should be kept on approximately the same basis as at other colleges.

No conclusion had been reached on the Annapolis protest, he said.

Boy, 3, Seriously Hurt As Father Backs Car

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 11.—Pinned against the wall of his father's garage while a car was being backed in, Robbie Sloan, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sloan, Douglas avenue, Lonaconing, was seriously injured.

The child had taken a ride with his father and was on the rear seat when Sloan started to back the car into the garage. The boy apparently got out without being noticed by his father and the moving car crushed him against the inside wall. He was unconscious when his father found him.

Waterways Association To Convene Here Nov. 16

The thirty-first annual convention of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association will be held at the Willard Hotel November 16-19, President J. Hampton Moore announced yesterday. Development, utility and maintenance of the Atlantic intracoastal waterway will be discussed.

Va. Sheriff Slayer Given Reprieve Until Nov. 25

Richmond, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—Gov. Price late today granted a reprieve until November 25 to George W. Pingley, who was to die in the electric chair Friday for the killing of Frederick County Sheriff J. W. Newcome.

The Governor wished more time to study the history of the case and a petition for commutation of sentence, signed by approximately 570 persons of the Winchester area, Secretary of the Commonwealth Raymond Jackson said two of the signers were brothers of the sheriff, who was killed February 13 when he went to Pingley's home to serve a warrant.

The mountainland farmer's petition for a writ of error was denied by the Virginia Supreme Court on October 5. The full record of the case, together with the plea for clemency, was laid before the Governor several days ago, but he has been occupied with other matters since then.

Music Board to Meet In Harrisonburg

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—The fall board meeting of the Virginia Federation of Music Clubs will be held October 19 at Madison College here, it was announced today. Miss Edna Schaeffer, of the college faculty, has arranged a program for the meeting.

U. S. Awards $61,100,000 To Pa. Toll Superhighway

Gov. George H. Earle, Democratic candidate for the Senate seat, Davis has joined James in attacks on Earle's Harrisburg administration, now under investigation, and in charging political use of relief funds.

Arrangements for the new superhighway were completed over the opposition of Roy Greene, of Pittsburgh, who had petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission to build a high-sped diesel and freight railroad over the same route. Greene's petition was turned down by the ICC October 1, commenting that Greene "is opposed to the toll highway and his interest in the railroad appears to be influenced partially by his attitude toward the highway construction."

Several weeks ago Public Works Administrator Ickes announced the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission's application for a $26,000,000 grant had been approved.

Follows Railroad Bed

Yesterday Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the RFC in Washington said his agency agreed to purchase $35,000,000 of 3¾ per cent 30-year Commonwealth of Pennsylvania revenue bonds, completing arrangements for financing the project.

RFC Chairman Jones said his agency bought the issue on a 4¼ per cent yield basis and has sold $10,000,000 of the bonds to B. J. Van Ingen & Co., Inc., of New York, at 95½ per cent and interest.

Following the bed of a railroad started by the Vanderbilts a half century ago, the new highway will use many of the tunnels bored for the railroad venture, cutting with slight grade through the mountains. Ultimately the road would be turned back by the commission to the State system.

The announcement was expected to be seized on by Republican candidates as another indication of Earle-Jones aid from Washington.

Farley to Speak...

Meanwhile, Chairman Farley, of the Democratic committee, is expected to enter Pennsylvania next week in support of the straight Democratic ticket. He will be principal speaker at the $100-a-plate dinner in Philadelphia October 20, when State Democratic organizations will seek to raise $200,000 to replenish depleted campaign coffers.

The President, who last week received Pennsylvania Democratic candidates at Hyde Park, has indicated he will not speak in the State, but Senate Majority Leader Barkley will follow Farley on October 29 with a speech at a Pittsburgh rally. Other Administration leaders expected to campaign for Pennsylvania's Democratic candidates include Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Attorney General Cummings.

Voters Disapprove Duff Cooper Stand

London, Oct. 11 (AP).—Alfred Duff Cooper, who resigned as first lord of the admiralty because he disagreed with Prime Minister Chamberlain's peace of Munich policy, discovered today some of his constituents did not approve his action.

A committee of his electors announced it was in "complete agreement with the actions of the premier and the policy of the government," but deferred decision as to whether to accept Duff Cooper as its candidate in the next general election.

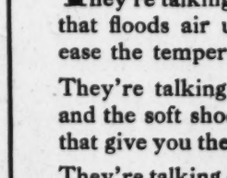
It looks like Five Years from Now!



In every 1939 Buick you get the skilled engineering and sturdy quality traditional to Buick—enriched by all the extra value which General Motors Science and Buick workmanship can provide.

THE vast Buick factory is a grand place to visit, these days.

Down the roaring aisles, throughout the sprawling bays there's an electric something in the air, a sense of great things happening.

They'll point to a sparkling new car inching down the assembly line—a car so different it makes you stop short, look long.

It looks like five years from now, they'll say of this dazzling 1939 Buick, and they're not talking of appearance only.

They're talking of "catwalk-cooling" that floods air under forced draft to ease the temperature of your engine.

They're talking of that Dynaflash great eight engine, instant with life and wringing good from every drop of fuel.

They're talking of weight-balance and gravity-center that hold you to your line—of wheels that camber to let you take the curves more safely—of new visibility—up to 413 square inches more glass in SPECIAL and CENTURY models.

They're talking a thousand and one details of Buick that you'll never know nor need to know but that to their schooled eyes spell a better built automobile.

And they're thinking of now as they talk.

For they know that no car sells spectacularly when it's merely up-to-date. They know that for big years a car has to be ahead—that a car which looks like the future means better times for today.

They know. You spot that in their glance.

Democrats Claim Unity
Split Campaign Group

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Gov. Harry W. Nice, Republican candidate for re-election, will make an intensive tour of Montgomery County today while Democrats claim that the county's Democracy is the most harmonious it has been in years.

Leaders of all factions of the Democratic Party joined in a meeting held last night at the Glenmont School, while Independent and Organization candidates and leaders were named equally on a campaign committee which numbers 100.

Lacy Shaw, Organization, and James H. Pugh, Independent, have been named joint chairmen of the Democratic campaign committee. They announced the appointment of the 100 members yesterday.

Dine in Gaithersburg

Gov. Nice will be accompanied by other State candidates and Republican county candidates in his tour of the county today. He will arrive at Rockville at 9:30 a. m., where he will be met by a motorcade of county Republicans.

The motorcade then will proceed to Sandy Spring at 10:15 a. m.; Laytonsville at 10:25 a. m.; Damascus at 11:05 a. m.; Clarksburg, 11:55 a. m.; and at 12:30 p. m., will arrive at Gaithersburg, where a luncheon will be served in the Masonic Temple.

The party will return to Rockville at 2:15 p. m. and then will visit Kensington, Bethesda, Chevy Chase, Silver Spring and Takoma Park, arriving there shortly before 4 p. m. for a parade on Carroll avenue, past the Washington Missionary College and thence by way of Flower and Carroll avenues to Denwood and Philadelphia avenues.

The State and county candidates will join in a Republican rally at 8 p. m. at the National Guard Armory at Silver Spring.

Democrats Plan Rallies

Republicans of the Takoma Park section will meet tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Masonic Temple at Takoma Park to plan the campaign.

Republicans of the Bethesda election district will meet Friday at the home of Capt. Chester Wells, Republican candidate for county commissioner, 9320 Jones Mill road, North Chevy Chase, Md., to organize a Seventh District Republican Club, modeled after the Thirteenth District Republican Club which has had a major part in planning the campaign this year.

Democrats are planning rallies at 8 p. m., October 22, at the Leland Junior High School in Chevy Chase and the National Guard Armory at Silver Spring, at which Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, Democratic candidate for Governor, and other members of the State and county Democratic tickets will speak.

Workers Announced

Plans are being discussed for a rally at 2 p. m. the same afternoon at Rockville High School, but this has not been decided upon definitely, leaders said yesterday.

Members of the Democratic workers' committee announced yesterday by Pugh and Shaw are:

Checks to Be Checked

Methods of paying released prisoners at the Rockville Jail have been ordered changed drastically as the result of the experience of Ralph Griggs, 27, of Winston-Salem, N. C., yesterday.

Griggs, arrested on a charge of vagrancy and ordered to pay a fine of $25 or serve 30 days on the county roads, served the sentence. When released Monday he was entitled to $10.38, or 75 cents a day for his work on the roads. He went to collect his check from the clerk of the county commissioner's office and found that someone had received his check for him.

As a consequence, the warden will be required to issue the checks to the prisoners or go to the office of the county commissioners to identify the prisoner. The custom formerly was to issue the check and have the warden identify the prisoner to the county treasurer for payment.

Price Forest Warden

Kinsmans in New Precinct

For the first time in 52 years no Kinsman will vote in the general election at the First Precinct of the Wheaton District. The sisters Kinsman, members of an old pioneer family, were transferred to the new Eleventh Precinct of the same district in the general registration yesterday. It was the last chance for voters to get on the books for the general election and a large number took advantage of the opportunity.

Legion Auxiliary Elects

Officers of Cissel-Saxon unit, American Legion Auxiliary, were elected last night at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Lauman T. Faulconer, Silver Spring, as follows: President, Mrs. Eugene Lincoln, Takoma Park; vice president, Mrs. H. S. Giusta, Silver Spring; secretary, Mrs. Margaret Neumann, Silver Spring; treasurer, Mrs. F. Paul Clark, Silver Spring; historian, Mrs. George A. Hood, South Woodside Park; chaplain, Mrs. Benjamin Hardesty, Silver Spring, and sergeant-at-arms, Mrs. J. M. Buffin, North Chevy Chase. Plans were made to furnish refreshments at a meeting tonight at the East Silver Spring School under auspices of Cissel-Saxon Post. The post will present awards to the members of the baseball teams it sponsored during the past season.

Four Corners Body Meets

Four Corners Citizens Association will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in the Sunday school room of the Four Corners M. E. Church. The association will act on a proposed ordinance to bar walkathons and dance marathons in the county and elect delegates and alternates to the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

Bishop Freeman to Visit

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman will visit Silver Spring today as honor guest at a luncheon at St. Mary's Church at Aspen, and later attend a meeting of the Northern Convocation of the Washington diocese at Grace Church. The convocation will hold both afternoon and evening meetings with the Rev. Richard Aselford, rector of the church and dean of the convocation, presiding.

Mrs. Magie Rites Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Agnes Magie, widow of Edward R. Magie, who died Monday at her home near Alta Vista, following a long illness, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today from the funeral home of W. Reuban Pumphrey, Bethesda, burial to be in Rock Creek Cemetery. The Rev. John L. Parlies, pastor of Bethesda Presbyterian Church, will officiate.

Mrs. Magie, a native of Washington, had lived in the Bethesda neighborhood about 30 years. She is survived by a stepdaughter, Miss Hazel Magie, Bethesda, and a brother, Robert Raines, Washington.

K. of C. Installs Officers

Man Confesses Hit-Run Deaths Of Two Youths

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hancock, Md. Oct. 11.—Trooper A. W. Achenbach of the Pennsylvania State police announced that Harry Hendershot, of near McConnellsburg, has confessed that he was the driver of the car which Sunday night struck and instantly killed Harry Gordon, 16, and Lemuel Thaux, 15, as they walked along a mountain road between here and McConnellsburg. The officers trailed the car by the tire tread. An 8-year-old son of Hendershot told police that "daddy did it."

Hendershot is being held for court on charges of involuntary manslaughter and leaving the scene of an accident without giving aid.

Fairfax Chief Of Chest Picks 9 Unit Heads

'39 Budget Is $15,250
Is $12,700 This Year
Receipts Were $11,300

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST, P. O. BOX 245, Fairfax, Va. Phone Falls Church 2088-M.

Beverly Coleman, Fairfax County Community Chest chairman, has named nine division chairmen for the November drive:

Division 1, Dr. E. C. Shull, Herndon; Division 2, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, McLean; Division 3, J. Craig Hunter, Vienna; Division 4, Lennig Sweet, Fairfax; Division 5, A. P. Grow, Falls Church; Division 6, Mrs. Alexander Zabriskie, Seminary Hill; Division 7, Mrs. Helen E. Buckley, Centerville District; Division 8, Mrs. Ray Huff, Lorton; Division 9, Robert Norman, Mount Vernon District.

The budget for 1939 totals $15,250 as against $12,700 for this year and receipts of $11,300.

The budget for venereal disease control was increased from $3,000 to $3,500; maternal and infant welfare from $2,000 to $2,500; general welfare, hospitalization, rehabilitation from $2,000 to $5,000; summer camps from $1,500 to $2,000; 4-H clubs from $300 to $500. The allotment of $1,500 for a juvenile worker was decreased to $750 with the expectation the county supervisors will provide the balance. The $1,000 to aid Boy Scouts was unchanged.

While the amount to be raised this year is increased, the quota assigned by the Washington Chest, to be raised locally, is slightly less than the $8,000 quota of last year. Fairfax County was the only suburban county in the Washington District which raised more than its quota.

Mrs. W.G. Watt Presides
14th Annual Meeting

Arlington County Bureau of The Post, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0509.

Delegates representing 24 woman's clubs in the Fourth Virginia District held their fourteenth annual meeting at the Washington Golf and Country Club yesterday. Mrs. William G. Watt, president, was in charge.

The morning session opened with an invocation by Mrs. Robert Livingston, followed by an address of welcome by Mrs. Ira Gabrielson, president of the Lyon Village club.

Miss Lucille Bland, president of the Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke on "Look to the Work the Times Reveal." Other speakers were Mrs. R. G. Boatwright, "Club Extension Work," and Mrs. Ray D. Whitlock, executive State secretary, on "Cancer Control."

At the afternoon session there was joint meeting with the junior members, addressed by Mrs. Beauford Mauck.

The meeting adjourned following reports from the district chairman, club presidents, and secretary and treasurer.

Young Democrats Meet

The Young Democratic Club of Arlington County, meeting last night at Lee Tavern, Glebe road, accepted recommendations favoring stagger terms of office for county board members made by its special committee headed by J. Maynard Magruder.

A referendum on the proposal will be held at the November election. The organization offered its aid to all civic bodies in the county in an effort to have sidewalks laid by the county to all school buildings.

Merchants Invited

Following a general discussion by the board of directors of Arlington Chamber of Commerce at its meeting yesterday, Fritz E. Westenberger, chairman of the retail merchants committee, announced a meeting of his committee October 18, to which all retail merchant members of the chamber have been invited to discuss their problems.

The Rev. Peyton R. Williams, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, will be guest speaker at a luncheon of the Arlington Kiwanis Club at Washington Golf and Country Club at 12:30 p. m. today.

To Give Pupils Tests

Dr. Ralph Beachley, county health officer, announced yesterday that beginning Monday the Schick test will be given in all county schools to determine which children are susceptible to diphtheria. It will be followed by administration of toxoid to those who react positively.

Mrs. Schaff Rites At Greencastle

Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 11.—Mrs. Catherine Leiter Schaff, 38, wife of Dr. Fred L. Schaff, of Greencastle, west of here, died late Saturday in the Martinsburg, W. Va., hospital following injuries received in an automobile accident at Inwood, near Martinsburg last Thursday.

Funeral services were held today at her Greencastle home, in charge of the Rev. Levi K. Zeigler, pastor of the Waynesboro Church of the Brethern, and burial was made in Cedar Hill Cemetery. She was an only daughter of former Commissioner L. H. Leiter and Mrs. Leiter. Her parents, her husband and two children survive.

Alexandria Council Backs School Loan

Amount Is $80,000
Total Cost Is $150,000
PWA to Give the Rest

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU, 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Temple 3767. Delivery Service, phone Alex. 1400.

Alexandria City council last night authorized a loan of $80,000 to be used as the city's share in the cost of erecting the new $150,000 school building on Cameron Mills road, in the Jefferson Park section. A PWA grant will cover the remainder of the cost.

City Manager Carl Budwesky declared that the city would save $3,000 by having the city engineer's office carry out inspection of the building, instead of bringing in an outside firm.

The council also placed on first reading appropriations of $10,400 to cover improvements in the city hall, and $15,000 for repairs in the city jail.

John Walsh, former general counsel of the Federal Trade Commission and a brother of the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, was the speaker at the Discovery Day banquet of Fitzgerald Council, No. 459, Knights of Columbus, held last night in the George Mason Hotel. He spoke on the principles of the order and the origin of the observance of Discovery Day.

Other speakers were Daniel J. Callahan, supreme treasurer of the Knights of Columbus, who has the distinction of having installed every council except one of the Knights of Columbus, and State Deputy Thomas A. Murphy.

Edward Reed was toastmaster, and the address of welcome was given by Edward T. Lannon, who will be installed this evening as the new grand knight of the local order. The dinner and dance following were attended by a number from Washington and Clarendon.

The regular Columbus Day meeting will be held at 8 o'clock this evening, with the installation of officers, and at 11:15 p. m. Grand Knight Lannon will give a radio address over Station WJSV.

Rotary Women Plan Sale

The Women of Rotary of the Alexandria club will sponsor a rummage sale on Friday at 223 North Payne street for the benefit of the Alexandria Children's Home and Day Nursery, a Rotary Club project.

All members of the families of the local Rotarians are urged to assist with contributions delivered at the home of Mrs. Felix Swope, 126 North Columbus street. Others assisting in the collection of supplies for the sale are Mrs. Ray Brehaut and Mrs. Eugene Simpson.

Visits Schools

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate and secretary, visited the Catholic schools in Alexandria on Monday. He was accompanied on his tour of the local schools by the Very Rev. Thomas A. Rankin, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church.

Dr. Schuman to Talk

Dr. Nathan G. Schuman will address the members of the Jefferson School Parent-Teacher Association at their meeting this afternoon at 3:15 o'clock. This will be the third of the series of health talks before school organizations sponsored by the Alexandria Medical Association.

Fawcett Funeral Today

The funerals of Wallace Hooff Fawcett, city engineer of Bristol, Va., who died suddenly Monday in that city, will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon from St. Paul's Episcopal Church, conducted by the Rev. Ernest A. DeBordenave, rector. Burial will be in St. Paul's Cemetery.

Huff to Address Lions

Ray L. Huff, superintendent of the District of Columbia Penal Institution, which includes the Lorton Reformatory and the District Workhouse at Lorton, will be the speaker at the meeting of the Alexandria Lions Club at 12:30 o'clock today in the George Mason Hotel.

Carstairs is a blend of several distinguished whiskies. It is 86.8 proof. The straight whiskies in this product are four years or more old. 57½% straight whiskey and 42½% other whiskey four years or more old. Carstairs Bros. Distilling Co., Inc., New York, N. Y.

A Name of Fine Traditions since 1788

IF YOU'LL ask any one of Jim Thompson's* people why his business is so successful, you'll get a reply like this: "The Boss is frank about having things right! He'd rather lose a sale than skimp his service."

"Having things right" is a principle Jim follows in nearly everything he does. He doesn't hereat, overdrink, overplay or overwork. He practices moderation and good taste in whatever he chooses or uses.

To men of such fine discrimination and judgment, the Carstairs family have been furnishing good liquors since Colonial times. The Carstairs Whiskey of today is a blend of several selected whiskies—the youngest of which is 4 years old. Magnificently combined to give you rich, robust flavor, with light body.

Teachers Come First

Addressing a meeting of the Kalorama Citizens Association Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the School Board, observed that the prime need of the Washington school system is well-qualified teachers. Adequate school buildings come next.

Mrs. Doyle's reminder that an efficient teaching personnel is more important than material equipment is especially timely under existing conditions. In a city such as Washington, with obsolete and overcrowded school buildings, there is always danger of forgetting that the first requisite of a sound system of education is a teaching staff, competent to do full justice to the tasks of instruction assigned them.

Ideally, of course, every city should provide not only a well-equipped teaching staff for the public schools but also the housing and other facilities required to assure carrying on instruction under favorable conditions. Actually, municipalities are constantly forced to decide whether limited resources shall be employed to engage more teachers or devoted to school-construction projects. Too often the decision means a short-sighted subordination of pressing personnel needs to demands for improved material equipment.

School systems, and public and private colleges and universities in all parts of the country, are today laboring under the handicap of a misdirection of funds. Too often money has been spent for bricks and mortar when it should have been used to build up personnel. In certain institutions the unfortunate results of this wrong emphasis are plain to the casual observer. There is danger that they will be underrated or forgotten, however, by the heads of public school systems confronted by a real and pressing need for new and expanded housing facilities.

It is very reassuring, therefore, to know that the president of Washington's School Board fully appreciates the paramount importance of an adequate teaching personnel, even in a community with inadequate school buildings.

Mr. Lewis' Challenge

At last chieftains of the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization have publicly recognized the personal nature of the row that keeps labor divided into two hostile camps. Impartial observes have long believed that the breach could be healed with new leadership on both sides. The confirmation of that belief within labor's own ranks puts a tremendous responsibility upon William Green and John L. Lewis.

It is true, of course, that the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. represent sharply different types of labor organizations. Expanding industrial unions undoubtedly constitute a threat to some craft unions of the traditional type. But these differences could doubtless be ironed out by reasonable leaders who are not actuated by personal rivalry. The problem is by no means insoluble. Attempts at solution thus far have failed largely because the will to co-operate has been so weak.

When the A. F. of L. convention at Houston called upon John L. Lewis to give up the leadership of the C. I. O. as the price of peace it properly emphasized the personal nature of the dispute between the two wings of organized labor. Mr. Lewis is held responsible, with a good deal of justification, for the failure of the peace negotiations last winter. If he would step aside, the breach in labor ranks might soon be healed.

In his quick reply to the challenge Mr. Lewis was likewise realistic. To resign and leave his rival victorious is too much to ask of any man. So Mr. Lewis suggested as a reasonable alternative that both he and Mr. Green make way for less antagonistic leaders. In spite of the fact that this would still leave him in control of the United Mine Workers, while Mr. Green would be an executive without a union, the best interests of organized labor call for acceptance of the offer.

There is no question that the rank and file in both camps would like to bring to a close the futile controversy of their leaders. Loss of two chieftains who find it impossible to co-operate for the common good would be a small price to pay for that achievement. If Messrs. Green and Lewis fail to act, after acknowledging the fact that they are themselves the first obstacles to an understanding, pressure for their resignations is likely to be felt.

Conflicting Policies

Basic differences of policy between the Departments of State and Agriculture were further emphasized by the address of Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, in New York on Monday. That section of his speech dealing with export subsidies must be interpreted as a slap at a policy recently inaugurated by Secretary Wallace.

"We cannot hope to force our surpluses upon foreign countries," said Mr. Sayre, "by resorting to strong-arm methods . . . Neither can we expect anything but extremely costly disappointment from attempts to 'worm' our way into foreign markets through the medium of export subsidies."

Secretary Wallace attempted to explain the AAA wheat export subsidy in his recent speech at Fort Worth. Use of this method by other countries, he said, "has forced us to do likewise." He admitted that, if used on a large scale over a period of time by competing countries, export subsidies are "mutually self-defeating." It is far better, he said, for nations to work out trade arrangements on a sensible and equitable basis.

Yet the subsidy program goes forward. A recent report showed that 14,000,000 bushels of wheat (part of it in the form of flour) have been sold under the export program. The average loss to the Government has been 12.6 cents per bushel.

Assistant Secretary Sayre must have been thinking of this AAA policy when he declared in New York:

> In many minds export subsidies offer a plausible solution; but such a method is as unsound at bottom as it is plausible on its face. Practical experiences in numerous countries which have adopted export subsidies have shown that this method creates more problems than it solves. Export subsidies are powerless to move exports in the face of foreign quota restrictions, import licenses, exchange controls, and antidumping laws; and they constitute an uneconomic giving away of our substance to foreign nations for less than cost.

The Department of State is making a constructive effort to expand foreign outlets for agricultural products. It has been seriously handicapped in this undertaking, however, by the AAA policy of restricting crops and maintaining prices above the level of the world market. As previously pointed out in The Post, the AAA is remodeling our agricultural system on the basis of national economy. The goal toward which the State Department is working through its trade agreements program is a freer international economy. Of course, every effort to widen the disparity between American prices and foreign prices for similar commodities makes it the more difficult for the United States to lead such a movement.

The existing surpluses of several basic commodities are sufficient evidence of the failure of the two departments to harmonize their basic policies. There is good reason for Secretary Wallace to be concerned over the dilemma in which the AAA has become involved. But instead of working toward the restoration of natural outlets for farm products he resorts to foreign and domestic subsidies. His latest plan calls for distribution of surplus crops within the country with the aid of public funds.

In the domestic field the Department of Agriculture is thus working toward self-sufficiency. In foreign trade it is using methods that tend to encourage erection of trade barriers. Both trends are contrary to the policy behind the reciprocal trade agreements program.

A Meager Haul

The Department of State has published a preliminary list of 86 persons and firms who are acting as agents for foreign principals and who have registered that fact with the Government.

This is a singularly meager haul for so far-flung a net as that cast by the act of June 8, 1938. That measure requires the registration with the Department of State of "any person who acts or engages or agrees to act as a public relations counsel, publicity agent, or as agent, servant, representative, or attorney for a foreign principal or for any domestic organization subsidized directly or indirectly in whole or in part by a foreign principal."

The provision is as comprehensive as anyone could desire. Presumably no one working for a foreign principal, except diplomatic officials and others specifically exempted, can escape the spotlight which the law is supposed to throw upon them. But, unless registration to date is only a sample of that to come, one of two conclusions is indicated.

The first is that the sum total of foreign propagandist activity, direct and indirect, in the United States has been greatly exaggerated. The alternative conclusion is that the great majority of those engaged in such propaganda have so far managed to escape the provisions of the law and will probably continue to do so.

Indeed the department's current list, while it includes some who are admittedly engaged in propagandist activities, includes many more whose connection with foreign principals is that of legal, commercial or advertising agents.

Possibly it is a good thing to have such connections opened to public scrutiny. It may also be useful to have on the statute books a law whose punitive features can be invoked to compel those paid to carry on propaganda for foreign agents to come forward and admit that fact. But the law would be more effective in this regard if it were more discriminating and better drawn. Its passage aroused hopes which under existing circumstances can only be disappointed.

The New Court Rules

The Bar Associations of the District of Columbia, of Maryland and of Virginia are to be commended upon the "Institute on the New Federal Court Rules," which they convened here last week. About 1,000 lawyers became law students again and spent three full days, not excluding a very seductive Saturday afternoon, in studying the procedure which has just gone into effect.

Contrary to a prevalent belief, lawyers generally are not working to make law more abstruse and procedure less simple. The reverse is the fact, as the most casual inspection of the proceedings of the various bar associations will show. And one of the most outstanding achievements of the lawyers themselves is the formulation and adoption, after more than five years of hard work and sound criticism, of these New Rules, which will govern all ordinary litigation in the Federal Courts throughout the country and practically all litigation here in the District.

The New Rules mark a revolution in American legal practice. Heretofore we have lived under the "sporting" theory of the trial of cases. Under this theory the lawyers played a complicated game for which the client paid the bill. If one lawyer before trial made his opponent disclose a fact which the latter had been trying to conceal, he made a single; if he caught his opponent in an error of pleading he made a double; and if he sprang a surprise in a major issue he scored a home run.

The New Rules abolish the sporting theory. They are designed to require every lawyer to disclose, not at the trial but before it, the facts which he intends to prove, and to admit before the trial the truth of all facts which are not really in dispute.

Many dear friends of the old-time trial lawyer are abolished, including the demurrer and the writs of mandamus and scire facias. Doubtless there will be some tears shed by former local champions as well as by some All-American players. But, while the New Rules will not bring the millennium, they will tend to shorten vastly the time of trials and the expense of litigation and to increase greatly the probability that justice will be done.

The New Federal Rules are not the products of hopeful youngsters or idealists without experience. Almost every provision is taken from actual practice in one or more State courts throughout the country, where the worth of the particular provision has been tested. They have been submitted to the judges and to hard-boiled committees of lawyers who will have to make their livings under them. And now, at the end of five years, they have been approved and adopted.

The large attendance at the local Institute supports the hope that, with the impetus thus given to common sense, simplicity and efficiency in litigation, the States will follow the lead of the Federal courts, and revise their own procedures along similar lines, to the benefit of the legal profession as well as of the public.

An eminent physician says 50 per cent of the doctors would starve if people would learn to control their emotions. Yes, and 90 per cent of the politicians wouldn't be any too fat.

Those who are so bitter toward the Administration should adopt a philosophical attitude and reflect that a President of today is just a picture on a postage stamp tomorrow.

There aren't many lazy persons. Almost anybody would work now and then if he could do what he wanted to do when he felt like doing it.

Explaining An Empire

From the New Yorker.

No people but the British, we imagine, could preserve the myth of kingship so solemnly; no other nation, faced with the hard, immediate fact of dissolution, would have taken time out for this little excursion into fantasy. The prime minister goes to ask the opinion of a bewildered young man whom nobody expects to have one and to whom nobody would pay the slightest attention if he had.

At first this seems mysterious, but actually it is perfectly in keeping with the British character. "Presumably," says John Bull, "there isn't any God; on the other hand, there is a remote possibility that there may be, in which case it would be extremely foolish for me to slight his representative." Great Britain has always tried to stick in with the right people. It is the explanation of the empire.

Letters to the Editor

Hitler's Statesmanship

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It gave me untold delight to read the letter of October 7 entitled, "Unholy Propaganda." More common sense was never crammed into a letter to The Post before.

The press conception of Hitler is almost entirely false. I am no admirer of Hitler, no Nazi, but it is easy to see that the ravings of our own press contain more hysteria than is imputed to the aforementioned dictator. Although he is painted as an insane, power-crazed demon, in reality he is little more than a shrewd, somewhat emotional and romantic, statesman.

I do not think he ever had any intention of going to war. The entire affair was a skillfully arranged war scare. Starting with the military maneuvers, the Nuremberg boasts, the threats of Munich, and ending with his October 1 ultimatum, he piled climax upon climax, and tension upon tension, until he worked the frantic world up to such a pitch that England and France were as putty in his hands.

How could he have gone to war? Germany is now on the brink of financial ruin. If he won, it would have been a victory with both victor and conquered in a state of complete collapse. If he lost, he would have had to face a fury greater than Germany faced in 1918. A war would defeat all the aims of Nazidom.

Hitler is a clever statesman who is out for the good of his country only. Nazilism is a very dangerous doctrine, and since it is an unnatural form of government, it is destined to collapse. I sincerely hope that the press will cool off and give us some opinions less colored by emotion. R. W. FLINT.

Post-Crisis Views On Europe

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One thing is clear from the Saarbruecken speech: Hitler, despite his earlier protestations, will not rest until the European democracies are at his mercy. Through a combination of events that may yet bring about the "decline of the west" predicated on Spengler's cyclical theory of history, the Nazi-Fascist empire is being welded link by link; and, if Nationalist Spain finally capitulates the old balance of power will cease to exist.

The success of both the Austrian and Czechoslovak coups was due in large measure to proper timing, but had England and France not given Hitler such opportunities as he seized upon, "events," as he said, "might have easily taken a different turn."

After the treaty of Versailles had been scrapped and the pledges freely given by Germany in the Locarno and Kellogg-Briand pacts had been broken, it is difficult to understand how Messrs Chamberlain and Daladier relied so much on Hitler's word; therefore, it is not surprising that a strong undercurrent is now flowing from the so-called Munich "peace with honor" to the effect that their faith may soon be rudely shattered

Along with the foregoing considerations, your editorial captioned "Swastika and Cross" in The Post of October 10 explains why the persecution of Catholics since Anschluss has been intensified, especially in Vienna, culminating in the dastardly assault on Cardinal Innitzer.

The heavy religious counterweight attached by Hitler to the Rome-Berlin axis has dragged Mussolini down, and it may very well be the pull which caused the latter to inaugurate a policy of Jew-baiting. This fact also appears to be the driving force behind the recent Italian demand for a revision of the accord with the Vatican.

Arlington, Va., Oct. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to know why you cut out two paragraphs from my letter of October 2 to you. Were those paragraphs too radical for your independent paper? Or were you afraid of offending your English reading friends?

Truth is magnificent and it should prevail. Mr. Chamberlain proclaimed by radio "I cannot conceive why we should be digging trenches and preparing to go to war for people of whom we know nothing about." It seems strange that from 1914 to 1919 England, France, United States, Serbia, Italy and Russia and probably all of the other civilized and semi-civilized countries knew who the Czechoslovak people were and where they lived; yet today England knows nothing about them. According to this, the education in England must be spreading at a rather slow rate.

If the British Empire is crumbling to pieces, as some observers think it is, then Mr. Chamberlain's regime is speeding up her dissolution. England always has had and still has strong and able men to steer her foundering ship in the right direction, but it remains to be seen if these capable leaders will be given a chance to get to the ship's helm before it is too late.

The odds were in favor of the allies if they only had dared to plunge in while the water was warm.

Hitler's easy and overwhelming victory dealt a hard blow to democracy in the whole world, and the signs of it are already evident in England and elsewhere.

JOSEPH PRYMEK.

Annapolis, Oct. 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of September 9 appears a persuasively plausible communique from Mr. Luigi Criscuolo, the burden of whose theme is that "the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia should not cause the shedding of tears on the part of people in America who believe in democratic institutions."

To correct but a few of Mr. Criscuolo's misstatements it might be pointed out that Czechoslovakia is not, as he asserts, a synthetically created republic whose total history dates from the now buried Treaty of Versailles. The annals of her recorded past as an independent state extend back through centuries of achievement in war and peace. Nor is he at all kind in saying that with the post-war resurgence of the Prague government it initiated a policy of oppressive arrogance toward its racial minorities. Competent neutral observers are fairly unanimous in according high praise to Czechoslovakia's singular humanity in this respect.

By contrast he tries to make out that the Tyrolean Germans and Dodecanese Greeks are content and flourishing under the benign rule of Rome. This is hard to accept in the face of frequently appearing articles in reputable American journals telling of the despair and resentment which these minorities feel toward their Fascist conquerors.

"I did not suspect that Mr. Criscuolo's letter might be a piece of special pleading for totalitarianism until I came upon the following interesting news item in the New York Times of October 9, Section 1, page 38: "Luigi Crusciolo, investment banker and Italo-American publicist, issued a statement yesterday from his office, 40 Wall street, condemning the action taken Friday by New York Supreme Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo in sending a cable message to Mussolini mentioning the possibility of an anti-Italian boycott in New York City . . ."

"Those Dang Trees"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent editorial, "Unhappy Legacy," indicates thare is still some worry as to the fate of a few cherry trees around the Tidal Basin.

Can anyone tell me why so much solicitude is lavished upon those importations?

If there be any trees as contrary and unnaccommodating as the Japanese cherry I do not know where you would find them. Appeal to them as you may, they will not condescend to bloom anywhere near the date the authorities so hopefully advertise to a waiting world. Cuddled and crooned over you might expect some small consideration from them in return—but no, without a single good reason, the buds of Nippon will discommode anybody, sometimes for weeks. When they do finally decide to burst forth they try to disappoint as many more people as possible by beginning to shed petals almost before you can complete one round trip to Hains Point.

I do not trust those dang trees, anyway It's well known they have communistic or fascist tendencies. Why, did not the first batch to come over carry secret trouble makers concealed in their bark and have to be deported to prevent serious disorder among our domestic trees? Right you are.

Speaking of domestic trees, did ever the flowering cherry see the day it could match floral beauty with full-bloom dogwoods of the United States of America? Can anyone imagine a more gorgeous show than the one we might have had around the Basin if we had planted dogwood? A sturdy, honest, American tree that can take it—any kind of weather—and still flower at the right time and out-glory and outlast all your Japanese cherry blossoms, single and double. The dogwood doesn't die if it gets its feet wet either.

If this be treason, then make the most of it. At the worst I can escape in a jinrikisha disguised as a shotgun. ROGER GISH McDARE.

Grave Forebodings

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Fascists are at work on this side of the Atlantic. The oil from properties confiscated by Mexico, that were owned and developed by Americans and citizens of other Democratic countries, is now being sold to Germany, Italy and Japan in exchange for articles manufactured in those countries.

The British fleet no longer protects our Eastern seaboard and the invincible French army is now an exploded myth. The isolation, on which our foreign policy and national defense was built, has vanished overnight, and we are rudely awakened to a realization that we must provide our own defense, and that our diplomacy must develop co-operation and mutual defense in Pan America, to cope with a common Fascist enemy.

The Fascists are several times more powerful and dangerous now through their recent depredations in central Europe. It has been about 150 years since the battles of Europe were fought on this continent, but unless we develop our national defense, history will repeat itself.

Some advocate boycotting goods manufactured in Fascist countries, but when we contemplate the fate of defenseless China caused by its boycott of Japanese goods, we should hesitate and defer this boycott until we build up our Army and Navy.

The Post Impressionist

Tut, Tut, Mr. Death!

ON A RECENT excursion to the Trans-Lux I saw what to me was an innovation, though it may be an old story to more veteran and faithful Trans-Luxers. I refer to a film potpourri called "Memory Lane," or something like that, which showed bits of an old Keystone Cop comedy with Fatty Arbuckle and a very youthful Mabel Normand, Woodrow Wilson, Will Rogers, the Lindbergh reception in New York and a half-dozen other reminders of an earlier and of course happier day, while the film orchestra played "Memories" in a soulful and lugubrious largo.

Now I may as well confess that what I suspect is an abnormal condition of my suprarenal gland has made me a most unpleasantly dewy-eyed sentimentalist. I am a push-over for "memory lanes," no matter where they wander or what manner of surfacing they wear (though, of course, the old red clay is preferable). Merely to meander in the past, with no destination whatever, is to me a thoroughly satisfactory way of spending an afternoon.

As it happens, I had already embarked upon a private "memory lane" of my own in the general direction of Hollywood before I saw the Trans-Lux film. My journey was occasioned by the deaths within recent weeks of three old film favorites: Pauline Frederick (remember "Zaza?"), Conway Tearle and Pearl White. I name them in order, like Faith, Hope and Charity. But the greatest of these by far, to me, was Pearl White.

It has been a good many years since I used to have dates with Pearl White at the movies on Saturday afternoons. Twenty-odd years, certainly; perhaps nearer to thirty. A good many of us boys used to have Pearl White dates. She knew it, too. She knew it because she was getting $10,000 a week because of those dates. At least her press agent used to say she was getting that, and possibly she was. I hope so. She was worth it.

But all of us, who used to sit enrapt while Miss White as Pauline extricated herself from one peril after another, grew older. In the course of time I for one lost track of her. I suppose the others did too. I would have said, had anyone asked me, perhaps, that I had forgotten her. But that wouldn't have been true. I know now. Not only had I not forgotten her, but she had remained a vivid memory.

Pearl White died some weeks ago in Paris. The reason I know now how vivid a memory she had remained with me is that the newspapers published a picture of her when she died. And I was profoundly shocked—just for a moment.

Very soon, of course, I realized it was not a picture of Pearl White. It was the picture of a woman in a leopard skin coat, a woman well groomed, whose make-up was chic; a woman around whose eyes maturity and humor had drawn the sort of little lines we like to see around a person's eyes. She looked as one whom time has used well. Better, perhaps, she looked as one who has used time well. And yet—I was shocked, until I realized that this couldn't be Pearl White.

I have said I had lost track of her. But the memory which sprang to the eye upon news of this death was the memory of a girl. Glamour, as a word, had not got its Hollywood contract in those days, and as I remembered her there had been no especial suggestion of gayety in the girl, nor of any striking intelligence.

The woman the newspapers pictured looked both gay and intelligent, but I resented her. She was not Pearl White. Pearl White was, and so far as I am concerned is, a beautiful youngster—beautiful, it may be, in a circusy way, but beautiful withal.

She was the girl who outwitted Death in scores of encounters. Death did his best. He really tried. He tried to run over her with railroad trains. He tried to shoot her. In the then infant automobile he played the dastardly chauffeur with her. He took her to the top of a high mountain and showed her all the wonders of the earth—all to be hers if she would only let him push her off. But she wouldn't!

Death couldn't touch Pearl White and he didn't touch her and don't tell me that Time ever could soften her up for him either. I don't know who was this strange lady who died in Paris. And I don't know what death overtook her there. I only know that the lady was not the Pearl White we used to have dates with at the movies on Saturday afternoons. And I doubt that the death which figured in this Paris episode was the Death we used to hiss so joyfully on the screen. The Death of those far-off days was just our little playmate.

The years (for all I mourn them) have improved both the art and the mechanics of the screen. But the years haven't improved Death. Death is a fairly static force century in and century out. The Death that played tag with Pearl White went Hollywood early in life when the technique of going Hollywood was little known. He was a softy before he had started. He wasn't good enough then to catch Pearl napping and I don't think he has become good enough since. I am glad I saw that photograph and knew it was not Pearl White, for I was sure all along that no peril which Paris could contrive ever could entrap America's Pearl.

U. S. Germans Protest

IN VIEW OF the attempt of the Nazi bund to extend Hitlerism to the United States it seems important to emphasize just now the fight of others of German blood against the provocative operations of Fritz Kuhn and his Nazi organization.

Indiscriminate resentment against all Germanic groups may be avoided if it is known and kept in mind that the Nazis are in the minority among those of German origin or stock and that no element in the American community is more angrily opposed to them.

The statement of Justice Gustave W. M. Wiebolt, of the New York court of special sessions, at a dinner of the New York council of the Steuben Society last Saturday is firm enough.

"WE KNOW that they are un-American in their ways and ventures," he said, " and that is something that we shouldn't stand for as an American organization. They do not believe in religious freedom."

Justice Wiebolt added that some members of the Nazi bund were not American citizens but that all members of the Steuben Society were, and called on all members of the society to stand together with one common goal to end the German-American bund.

Theodore H. Hoffman, national chairman of the Steuben Society, recognized in the bund an enemy of all patriotic, law-abiding Americans of German blood and made an address supplementing a long article published under his name in the October number of the Steuben News, the official bulletin of the national council of the Steuben Society.

"FOR FOUR years," he said, "we have been silent against the untruthful attacks on us by the bund. Now we must come out and show exactly where the great bulk of Americans of German extractions stand on this question."

In his reply to attacks by Fuehrer Kuhn's Nazi group, Mr. Hoffman wrote in the bulletin that a speech by Kuhn, as reported, was in essence a plain attack on the fundamental law of the United States.

"His cry, 'Away with parliamentarianism!'" Mr. Hoffman wrote, substituting therefore one leader whom all must obey, means nothing less than the abrogation of the rights of a free press, freedom of assemblage, freedom in the study of facts and to express conclusions and opinions thereon freely, freedom of religious belief, or, in other words, abrogation of democracy.

"HIS EXPRESSED views are equally fundamentally opposed to all the aims and purposes of the Steuben Society.

"It would seem that in the case of Mr. Kuhn the time has arrived to speak out in justice to its members, as well as to the American principles of Government, and that by not doing so, tolerance would become nothing but cowardice.

"If the A. D. V. (the Nazi bund) is truly American, why have not its members joined the many German societies already existing in America? Why do they keep abusing and vilifying citizens in these older societies who, 20 years ago, saved them from starvation by contributing thousands of dollars to the child feeding fund?

"If we must have one Fuehrer, for which post a certain Fritz Kuhn modestly admits that he is the man, what is this Fuehrer going to do for us?

"Will he tell us what we must think, if we may think?

"For whom we must vote?

"Where we must buy?

"What books and papers we are allowed to read?

"What color clothes we must wear?

"WHO ANOINTED this Fritz with the sacred castor oil of divine domination?

"It would seem somewhat similar to the little poodle dog barking at the moon when Mr. Fritz Kuhn paints a picture of the entire German-American element in this country being unified and kept unified like a herd of sheep in his camp with himself as shepherd."

There appears to be no comparable organization of Americans of Italian origin or stock loyal to the American Constitution and equally resentful against the parallel conspiracy to promote outposts of Italian Fascism in the United States.

Nazism, however, can have no more effective opposition than that now presented by Americans of German blood who have finally come to recognize the menace and effrontery of an anti-American organization whose activities imperil their reputation as citizens and their peace with their neighbors.

Zero Hour In Prague

By Stuart A. Rice

Fuel is expensive in central Europe. Though weather had been damp and chilly, the Alcron, finest hotel in Czechoslovakia, afforded no heat to its guests. I succumbed to a heavy cold, and on Tuesday evening, September 13, went early to bed, heavily dosed with medicaments. I dreamed that airplanes were dropping bombs in a steady staccato as they closed in on the central city. Presently the staccato was transformed into an insistent pounding upon my door. I roused myself and admitted my American colleague, Dr. Dunn.

"Henlein," he explained, "has issued an ultimatum that expires at 1 o'clock tonight. No one knows what it contains, but a German air fleet may be turning our surroundings into a shambles within an hour afterward. I have talked on the phone with Mr. Carr (the American Minister) and he advises that we pack up everything and be all ready to get by taxicab to the Legation at the first tangible word of trouble.

Dunn was gone, and I looked at my watch. It was 11:30 p. m. Still half asleep, and in the aimless manner characteristic of dazed human beings, I began a desultory sorting of papers. Presently a more practical kind of comprehension began to click. The first things to place upon my person were obviously my clothes, my passport and my funds—the latter of which were locked in the safe at the hotel desk. I dressed hurriedly but warmly and ran down the stairs to the lobby. Funds and passport secured, I began to encounter fellow delegates at the Twenty-fourth Biennial Session of the International Institute of Statistics, which was holding its meetings in Prague as the guest of the Czechoslovakian government.

Methorst, the secretary, from The Hague, proposed that the General Assembly of the Institute be convened the first thing in the morning and a vote be taken to declare the session adjourned. "But who will be there to vote?" askel Julin, the president, from Brussels. "We will call a meeting of the General Assembly immediately." Tables were rapidly placed together in the breakfast room, and 10 minutes later, at a little past midnight, 20 or 30 of the delegates, gathered in from the lobby, were called to order by President Julin.

"IS THERE objection to declaring this to be an official meeting of the general assembly of the institute?" asked the president. There was none. "It is obvious that scientific discussions cannot be continued under present circumstances," he went on; "How many are in favor of declaring our session adjourned?" All hands were raised but one, that of Bohac, secretary general of the Czechoslovakian committee on arrangements.

"M. Bohac a la parole," said the president, and Bohac arose.

Choked with emotion, he referred to the labors of love which for many months had gone into the preparations for these meetings and for the entertainment and pleasure of his nation's guests. "We do not view the situation as seriously as you. We have been living with it continuously. Only yesterday our foreign minister showed his confidence by inviting you to be his guests next Friday. But if your fears should be realized and war should come," he concluded with deep feeling, "every one of my countrymen is determined to resist to the very end."

The congress of the International Institute of Statistics had begun some days before the preceding incidents under constantly lowering clouds. The first tangible omen striking home directly to its participants was a telephone call from Waggerman, the German vice president, saying that none of the German members, comprising the largest of the expected delegations, would be able to attend. This applied equally, of course, to the Austrian members. A private communication from another source confirmed the inference that attendance had been specifically prohibited by the government of the Reich.

The nervous tension which affected the institute session is understandable in the light of its members' responsibilities in their respective home lands. A majority were public officials, charged with the administration of important governmental services throughout the world. The remainder were leading scientists in economic and sociological fields of investigation. The institute itself is a small, semiofficial organization, limited to 250 members, of whom no more than 25 may be elected from any single country, which is nearing 50 years of continued efforts toward international scientific and administrative collaboration.

THE GENERAL tension which affected these men, however, seemed least in evidence among the rank and file of Czechs themselves. During the mad rush for tickets, and for what we then believed might be the last trains out of Prague on Wednesday morning, I allotted a few minutes to call on the tailor who was making me some needed clothes for my homeward journey. I presented him with final payment and instructions for mailing the completed garments to my boat if circumstances permitted. But nothing would induce him to omit a methodical last fitting, with pins and tape, while I fidgeted from foot to foot and revised my mental calculations of the time required for the final items of departure.

Perhaps even more impressive of calm nerves than this display of the spirit of workmanship was an incident on Sunday evening. I stepped from the downpour of rain on Wenceslas Square, through which was moving an immense religious procession, into the dining room entrance of one of the leading hotels, patronized almost wholly by Czechs. President Benes was completing his national broadcast on the eve of Hitler's critical pronouncement at Nuremberg. As I stood at the door of the crowded and hushed room, beneath the amplifier, I could scrutinize the face of every person within. When the address ended with the playing of the national anthem and every person rose, a spirit which I can only describe as one of intense religious devotion seemed to settle upon the room. The faces about me seemed to portray, simultaneously, spiritual conviction, righteous determination and selfless resignation to duty.

In almost complete silence these people resumed their several ways, most of them passing out into the rainy night. Here were men and women, it seemed to me, who had passed beyond the stage of nervous tension and were calmly prepared to face, with sternness but fearlessness, whatever ordeal the future might have for them.

THE TAXICAB pushed its way through an overflow throng to a stop in front of the Wilson Station, Prague's reminder of America's part in its rebirth as a nation's capital. The throng appeared, as it was, a hoard of uprooted refugees. Forlorn and often aimless in expression, shawl-hooded women sat on top of pathetic baskets and bundles that seemed to contain their all.

Where they came from and where they were trying to go I do not know. Perhaps many of them scarcely knew themselves. News reports spoke of two streams—one from the Sudeten areas back toward Prague and another from Prague toward the borders. English-speaking travelers with first class tickets, such as we, commanded the prompt services of porters and we were presently escorted past overflowing third class carriages to the luxurious security of a wagon-lit marked "Eger-Nuremberg-Stuttgart-Strasbourg-Paris."

From our train windows the Bohemian countryside seemed somnolent and undisturbed in the balmy, late-summer afternoon. A few men in uniform could be seen guarding industrial plants in the vicinity of Pilsen and Marienbad. As we approached the German border at Cheb, or Eger, small boys beside the tracks extended the Nazi salute. During the half hour stop at Cheb, while passports were being examined and certifications of funds made to officials of both countries, a small detachment of soldiers in gaudy uniforms marched by, as if on dress parade. The following day we learned of a Czech-Sudeten conflict in this quiet town, a few hours after we had passed, in which 26 persons were killed.

Half an hour within the German border we passed a long train of flat cars loaded with lorries and other pieces of mobile army equipment, pointed eastward. Each piece or vehicle seemed fully manned with men in uniform, each man with full equipment. It seemed like a distant past in which I had witnessed another movement to the eastward — thousands of young Frenchmen with suitcases on trains between Paris and Strasbourg, and, all night long, across the station plaza at Strasbourg, moving up to their places on the Maginot line. I counted the days and it was just a week.

THE GERMAN papers on the platform at Nuremberg announced in banner headlines the extensive "murder" of Germans in a "night of terror" by Czechoslovakians. The party congress was over and the neraly one million of visitors who thronged the city when I passed through it a week earlier seemed all to have made an orderly departure.

As we were finishing dinner in the restaurant car—a good but expensive meal with plenty of butter—we were told to return at once to our compartments. Shades were pulled tightly, all lights were extinguished, and for possibly an hour the train moved through the bright moonlight at reduced speed, through countryside and villages that would have seemed completely deserted were it not for the silent and shadowy figures of train crews and attendants on station platforms and an occasional dim and green-shaded light on a desk in some station office. The silence was oppressive. Eventually the lights, within and without, came on.

When I awoke, the next morning, our train was at the station platform in Strasbourg. What a relief it seemed to be once more on the soil of France. And then I suddenly wondered if I had ever left that station platform, eight days earlier; for here were the same thousands of young Frenchmen with suit cases pouring from trains arriving from the west. The impression continued, through Bar-le-Duc, Chalons-sur-Marne, Epernay, Chateau-Thierry —names burned into memories of the great World War. And in Paris, at Havre, at Southampton, the drone of military airplanes overhead was seldom absent.

Now we are on the way home to the United States. Never before has the mid-Atlantic seemed so friendly and secure.

Clergy to Hear Gypsy Smith Talk

"Gypsy" Smith, 78-year-old English evangelist, will address a meeting of clergymen of all denominations in New York Avenue Presbyterian Church today as a prelude to a series of sermons he will give in Washington from October 23 to November 6.

The famed preacher, who was converted in a gypsy camp 61 years ago, will be introduced at today's meeting at 3 p. m. by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of the Methodist Church. The sponsoring committee of laymen is headed by William C. Bond.

Smith, known for his singing as well as his speaking voice, is at present conducting a series of revivals in Baltimore. During his two-week visit to the Capital, he will deliver sermons twice daily at the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest.

The G. O. P. Remedy

By Ernest K. Lindley

On Balancing The Budget

THAT PRICKLY perennial, the budget, is again being taken in hand by the President and his fiscal aides. Shall they attempt to balance the budget for the next fiscal year, which begins July 1, 1939? If so, should the balance be achieved by cutting expenditures or by increasing taxes? These questions are by now painfully familiar to the entire country.

The Republican answer, if Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg's radio broadcast of Monday night is regarded as authoritative, is to balance the budget by cutting expenditures. Senator Vandenberg harks back once again to the Democratic pledge of 1932 to reduce the cost of the Federal Government by 25 per cent, thereby insinuating that he thinks well of the idea. It is inconceivable that Senator Vandenberg actually favors cutting the budget 25 per cent below what it was when Mr. Roosevelt became President.

To do this he would have to throw out not only emergency relief and PWA but the rearmament program, the whole social security act, the Civilian Conservation Corps, all subsidies to farmers—in fact, almost everything the New Deal has done. In addition he would need to slash veterans' benefits, the research work of the Department of Agriculture, and many other activities which were considered proper and essential before the New Deal. Senator Vandenberg obviously cannot countenance such a cataclysmic remedy. Yet unless they do favor it, why do he and other critics of the Roosevelt Administration continue to quote a pledge made by the Democratic Party in 1932?

SENATOR VANDENBERG thunders his support of a budget balanced by reduced expenditures. But he specifies only one possible saving—in providing "more relief for less money." He leaves the comfortable impression that if the "political influence and unwarranted overhead expense" were eliminated from relief, the budget would be balanced. The plain fact is, as Senator Vandenberg knows, that if all overhead expense—whether political or nonpolitical, unwarranted or warranted—could be eliminated from relief, the saving would be trifling in comparison with the total Federal budget.

The cost of relief can be cut substantially in only one of three ways—by paying relief to fewer persons, by paying less to each person, or by substituting direct relief for the work program. If the Nation were willing to support all the needy in idleness on a straight "dole," the Federal budget could be cut materially. But Senator Vandenberg, in this speech, carefully avoids any attack on the principle of work relief.

NOT ONLY the "how" but the "when" is missing in Senator Vandenberg's strictures. He plainly implies that a balance should be struck immediately, but he does not say so—and neither do the passages which he quotes from the platform of the South Dakota Republicans before whom he spoke.

Senator Vandenberg's yearning for a balanced budget propably is no whit keener than Secretary Morgenthau's or, for that matter, President Roosevelt's. But if there is any lesson to be learned from the handling of Federal finances during the last two years it is that the budget should not be brought into balance too abruptly. In 1936, thanks to the bonus, the Federal Government had the biggest deficit since the World War period. The next year, due partly to increased taxes and partly to lower relief outlays, it moved very rapidly toward a balanced budget. Though some New Dealers would give it more weight than others, there is general agreement in the Administration that this was one of the causes of the recession that began in the fall of 1937. The President came slowly, and with evident reluctance, to the conclusion that it was an important factor. For he waited from the onset of the recession until mid-April, after the much heralded spring pick-up in business had failed to materialize, before he recommended another spending program.

WITH THE AID of this spending program, recovery is under way again. But it is still well below the level at which the Administration made the mistake of trying to balance the budget too quickly. Nobody knows how high the recovery curve will rise during the next nine months, much less how high it may rise during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, for which the budget is now being prepared.

Theoretically it remains possible to make the budget balance promptly by sharply curtailing expenditures. But the result might be another recession, a drop in revenues, and a consequent failure even to balance the budget. Theoretically it also remains possible to balance the budget promptly by sharply increasing taxes. But can taxes be increased sharply without slowing up or reversing economic recovery?

A third alternative is to hold both taxes and Federal expenditures where they are. If recovery goes far enough, the budget will achieve an automatic balance. The budget fell out of balance in the first instance because the national income shrank. The Federal tax system, as it now stands, is a powerful mechanism—probably powerful enough to harvest the revenue needed to pay for expenditures at their present level if the national income could be pushed up to a respectable figure.

WHAT THE PRESIDENT has in mind remains his own secret—if, indeed, he knows. But the pressure within the Administration, which reflects that on the outside, is toward a cautious mixing of the three alternatives:

First, some increased taxes here and there, including processing taxes to finance part of the farm program.

Second, somewhat smaller appropriations for relief and recovery next year.

Third, reliance on continuing economic recovery to close the remaining gap. Whether the gap will be closed during the next fiscal year cannot be foretold now or in January, when the new budget will be sent to Congress. By next June a better guess may be possible, but the answer will not be known until June, 1940.

Books And Things

Rascoe's Reader

THE HOUSE OF PUTNAM—G. P. Putnam's Sons, as we know it, though the founder of his house and all his sons are long since dead, and the last of his grandsons is now out of the firm—is celebrating its hundredth birthday; and for the occasion Burton Rascoe has collected, from the firm's century of books and from the files of what once was "Putnam's Monthly Magazine," a 1,000-page volume called "An American Reader" (Putnam's, $3.50).

"A centennial collection of American writings published since 1838 of unique value as entertainment, as a reflection of their times, as history and as integral parts of the national past," says the subtitle. They are all of that. Mr. Rascoe has exhumed from the firm's well-stuffed files material which goes far back of George Palmer Putnam's first excursions into publishing. He begins with Thomas Paine, whose collected writings the firm issued in 1894, a century after Paine's fame had begun to tarnish; he continues with Thomas Jefferson's account of the composition of the Declaration of Independence, as included in what Paul Leicester Ford, in 1892, called "The Autobiography of Thomas Jefferson;" he draws on the "Federalist" papers, which the late Henry Cabot Lodge edited for Putnam in 1888, and so blazes his trail into the more legitimate territory of material which first saw print beneath the Putnam imprint.

IT WAS "Wiley & Putnam" which was born in 1838; it became "G. P. Putnam" in 1848; "G. P. Putnam & Son" for a time after the Civil War; the final "s" was added only in 1872—celebrations of the centennials of corporate personalities usually involve complicated genealogies! George Palmer Putnam's first independent list, in 1848, included the names of Washington Irving, Edgar Allan Poe, James Russell Lowell and Bayard Taylor—an impressive galaxy for a young firm. Within the next five years Cooper's, Hawthorne's, Bryant's and Parkman's names were added to the list.

Some of the great names were unprofitable. Hawthorne's "Mosses From an Old Manse," Mr. Rascoe observes, sold a scant 750 copies, which discouraged both author and publisher. Hawthorne gave up finishing "The Scarlet Letter" for two years; Putnam let his author go to another house. George Haven Putnam, son of the founder, used to enjoy telling how his father had paid $14 to Poe for the manuscript of "Eureka" and lost money on its publication. Poe came into the office unkempt, reeking with alcohol, but full of an idea which, he said, would surely sell 1,000,000 copies. He also mentioned that he needed $14 to pay two weeks' back rent at his lodging house. He got the money at once and wrote the "prose poem," as he called "Eureka," in three days, being, as Mr. Rascoe puts it, "drunk as a hoot owl all those three days."

SO HERE are some of Hawthorne's "Mosses" and, if not the almost unreadable "Eureka," then some of Poe's better poems, including "The Raven." Here is Cooper on Old Ironsides, Irving on the Yankees of Connecticut and Thoreau on "A Yankee in Canada" (the essays first appeared in Putnam's Magazine). Here is Parkman's description of Fort Laramie, with a shrewd footnote by Mr. Rascoe. Parkman's book was announced in the magazine as "The Oregon Trail," the title under which it is known today. But when it appeared the title was "The California and Oregon Trail," because, Mr. Rascoe opines, "an astute publisher could not but see, in that year of 1849, the commercial value of including California in the title." California was dropped in 1872, when the gold had run thin.

Lindbergh's "We" is Putnam's most successful book of recent years. Mr Rascoe offers a sample of it, as also of Theodore Roosevelt (once a Putnam partner) and William Beebe and Rockwell Kent and Admiral Byrd. For a time the House of Putnam's had almost as close a monopoly of explorers' books as Macmillan on Maine novelists.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

The Only Alternative?

ON THE AIR the other night Edwin C. Hill took a little fling at the attitude this column has taken regarding the European crisis. "One wonders," he said, "why some of our most thoughtful, humane and liberally minded commentators on foreign affairs are so severe . . . with Prime Minister Chamberlain. Miss Dorothy Thompson, for instance, is especially relentless in her denunciation of Mr. Chamberlain's course in fending off another war. Miss Thompson implies double dealing, doctoring of state papers and various forms of skullduggery to deceive public opinion. What would the lady have? . . . Would she have preferred a world war, with all of its slaughter and horrors, to the peaceful surrender of 3,000,000 people of German blood to a German nation?"

THIS QUESTION has been asked of me so many times, in almost exactly this phraseology, by scores of correspondents, sometimes in a sorrowful and sometimes in a bitterly angry voice, that I think I owe them an answer. It is true that I have raised questions about the Runciman report, its date, its contents, its proposals and the difficulty of reconciling it with previous utterances. I have pointed out that the report was written after Chamberlain's first visit to Hitler, and not before it, and that, therefore, it could hardly have been the basis of British policy previous to that visit. That is an implication of "doctoring state papers."

• • • •

I, AND OTHERS, have pointed out that although the Czechoslovakia government appeared certain that France and Britain would help them if attacked, well informed corespondents as early as last May asserted positively that they knew from first-hand sources that France and Britain intended under no circumstances to defend Czechoslovakia.

That is certainly an "implication of double-dealing."

And everybody familiar with what has been going on in Great Britain knows that pressure, direct and indirect, has been put upon the British press, all the way from the left to the extreme right press, to prevent facts and questions about this whole matter being aired.

That, to a believer in free speech, is skulduggery.

AND IF MR. HILL asks, then, "what would the lady have?" the answer does not follow that what the lady would have is war with all its slaughters. What the lady would like to have, in the first place and the last place, Mr. Hill, at home and abroad, and in all the matters that affect your life and mine, and the kind of a world that you and I are going to have to live in, is the absence of doctoring, double-dealing and skulduggery.

And I am shocked to learn that Mr. Hill and a great many other people appear to believe that the only alternative to the acceptance of these things is war. If it is we are on a bad spot. Either we must go to war or live the rest of our lives in a world with which our own moral and intellectual natures are at war, or in which we abandon all standards and all criteria.

The argument that Mr. Hill presents is so current that it deserves to be aired and answered it, for it raises questions which affect the very basis of all civilized existence. The horror of war leads him to condone the skulduggery if it is necessary to the prevention of war—although a great many wars have resulted from skulduggery, and I notice that Britain is hastily arming as a result of "peace for our time."

THE HORROR, with which "thoughtful, humane and liberally minded commentators" regard what is happening over half of the Western civilized world, is the horror of realizing that in the name of peace we are establishing terror as an instrument of National and international policy! And "terrorism"—to quote Frederick Voigt's true and beautiful book, 'unto Caesar' —"is one of the most frightful afflictions that can visit mankind. It has a horror peculiar to itself, and one greater even than the horror of war."

It is a greater horror because it is absolutely illimitable. It is one sided aggression of the strong against the weak, of the ins against the outs, and nothing can ever stop it except its own ultimate exhaustion.

Even in terms of human life, it may be quite as destructive as war. In Russia, certainly, far more people have been killed by the Russian terror than perished in the Russian army during the World War. And it is an accelerating process. The terror of the Nazi revolution in Germany in 1933 was less virulent than the terror of the Nazi revolution in Austria in March of this year, and the terror of the Nazi revolution in Czechoslovakia is worse than the one in Austria.

TERRORISM is certainly less destructive of the outward expressions of civilization than war, but it is infinitely more destructive of civilization itself.

All of northern France was ravaged by the great war, but France has been rebuilt, as fair as ever.

But destroy the free, skeptical French mind; put upon France the yoke of absolute tyranny; teach the children of France to spit upon every previous institution of a great humane tradition, and you will destroy France though Paris stands.

And if, out of fear of war, the English people docilely surrender centuries-old liberties and learn comfortably to live without them, then England is destroyed, though the towers of Westminster are intact. When England loses the aristocratic spirit of Shakespeare, the spirit that created that glorious and imperial mongrel, the English language; when she loses the will to govern not an empire but herself when she fears to draw the chivalric implications of a great Christian tradition which has established that unforced unity which is the admiration of the world; when a bold spirit minces all its words, then the Shropshire lad will no longer walk the fields and England will have perished—as Germany is perishing the while she becomes the master of the world.

THE ARGUMENT that the end justify acts by the most perverse sidious force undermining our whole society. The world becomes increasingly callous to means and tends increasingly to justify acts by the mos perverse distortion and suppression of facts.

Our bodies are not being killed, but our minds are being corrupted and our eyes are blinded.

It is hardly considered tactful in the midst of peace, to raise the fact that five million Jews live in the territory which now comes under Hitler's sway, and these people, half the number of human being killed in the great war, are being progressively submitted to the most inhumane, humilating and inescapable terror.

Millions have paid for this peace, and will go on paying for it.

THE ATTITUDE taken toward the events of the last month is important because it is profoundly symptomatic not only for Europe, but for ourselves.

The human mind connot live in a state of continuous division. Every act of terror which is appoved and accepted prepares us for a new act of terror—not, perhaps, from Nazi Germany, but from other sources closer at home.

Slowly standards disintegrate, to the point where they cease to exist. And then what we have is simply barbarism.

'Too Hot to Handle, Is Almost Precisely That!

New Gable-Loy Film Packed With Thrills
Gilbert and Sullivan Have Real Rivals
News Notes and Chatter of the Theater

ALTHOUGH the excitement of the thrilling exploits in the casual lives of the newsreel cameramen probably will distract audience attention from the fact, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new starring vehicle for Clark Gable and Myrna Loy, "Too Hot to Handle," might understandably raise some doubt as to the authenticity of all the "clips" that appear on the motion picture screens to bring world events close to public consciousness. It is all very hip-hip-hooray entertainment, but it reveals the methods by which some colossal fakery might be perpetrated, even so.

BELL.

There have been many pictures tinged with the inflammatory tinctures of "hokum," but none of recent vintage comes to mind that has been so generously splashed with this rousing quality of dependable stimulus as the present subject. The major episodes of the story will pull any susceptible spectator right out of his chair. Audiences that enjoy a melodramatic hypodermic will eat it up.

In a general sort of way, "Too Hot to Handle," is constructed after the pattern of "Test Pilot," with the adventures of the newsreel cameramen substituted for those of the hardy young gentlemen who take huge ships into the air to find out whether they will crack up under stress. It begins with the bombing of Shanghai, embraces the crash of a round-the-world aviatrix, the destruction of a munitions ship afire off New York, the machine-gunning of that barricaded bandit up in the Bronx and the rescue of a lost aviator from the savage jungle tribes in the inaccessible regions of South America.

Again as in "Test Pilot," Miss Loy is cast as the girl who falls in love with Clark Gable against her better judgment, but in the end surrenders completely to his devotion to duty and the "kick" he gets out of risking his neck at every turn and scooping his rivals by fair means or foul.

The whole thing is played in a high key and possesses that taut quality of emotional strain that springs from close-clipped and breathless speech and a tornado of action that seldom eases down from cyclonic velocity.

Those who drenched themselves in cold perspiration, watching this trip-hammer drama in preview, yesterday afternoon were not sufficiently hypnotized to permit the fine supporting performances of Walter Pidgeon, Walter Connolly and Leo Carrillo to elude them. All three have Yankee batting averages in this one. And those Amazonian savages were pretty magnificent, too—even if they were filmed somewhere down in Dutch Guiana!

The Palace, these next two or three weeks, beginning Friday, will be no place for those unhappy souls who are in search of some reliable cure for insomnia. "Too Hot to Handle" will put such a powerful pull on your nervous system that you may never be the same again.

* * * *

Frank Capra, Columbia's ace director, who made "It Happened One Night," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "Lost Horizon" and the current "You Can't Take It With You," among a long list of other screen successes, is in Washington doing a little quiet research work for a new picture he has in mind. He is garrisoned at the Mayflower and this morning at 11 will receive the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the press in a sufficiently tolerant mood to give them a chance to try to find out how he does it. I somehow doubt that any of us will come out a great director after this "one easy lesson," but it will be interesting, nevertheless, to talk with the man whose pictures always lay eggs at the box office—golden ones. More of this later.

* * * *

There might be something mildly obnoxious, as several commentators have implied, in drawing comparisons between Maxwell Anderson and Kurt Weill and Gilbert and Sullivan, were it not for the fact that there is much in "Knickerbocker Holiday," now at the National, to recall the authors of the Savoyard operas at their comparative best. Mr. Anderson has contrived some lyrics for his first collaboration with Mr. Weill that Mr. Gilbert, were he living, would find it extremely difficult to surpass. I have in mind particularly the pithy words of the "How Can You Tell an American" number. This is a tricky composition that will do with a lot of listening.

Mr. Weill's musical score, furthermore, is as finely diversified a bit of composing as the light musical stage has encountered since goodness knows when—ranging as it does, all the way from a richly harmonized "Dirge" to the gyrating scenes of the Indians' introduction of the "Shag" and the "Big Apple" to the Nieuw Amsterdam of 1647. This latter passage is further interesting in that it throws a cloud of obscurity around the actual origin of New York's present Harlem! It seems, from present evidence, that it came up from just the other side of Flushing, instead of out of the deep African jungles.

But, after all, it was more hysterics than history that Washington Irving and Mr. Anderson were writing, so what difference does it make? "Knickerbocker Holiday" just happens to be one of those unique musical comedies of native origin that no one will want to miss.

* * * *

And still those previews pile up. Perhaps one of the swankiest of the week will be the advance, invitational showing of "Life Dances On"—"Un Carnet de Bal," in its original rendition—for which handsomely engraved cards are out under the name of the Little Theater for 9:45 Friday night, October 14. This event is deemed so important as to warrant the interruption of the current bill and the clearing of the house of its regular audience to permit the preview. "Life Dances On" was awarded the gold cup, international first grand prize, at Venice, as "The Finest Film Produced Throughout the World in 1937," and would seem to justify the unusual preparations that are being made for its advance showing to a distinguished audience.

"The Birth of a Baby," probably the most controversial film of recent release, today enters its second week of public exhibition at the Rialto Theater. Sponsored by the American committee on maternal welfare and dedicated to the highest ideals of motherhood and its safeguarding, the picture sets forth in frank and understandable terms how best the health of expectant mothers and their babies may be conserved. The film was not made for sensation-seekers, but for those concerned with the welfare of the human race.

Whether the theater is the proper arena for this form of education remains a question for the individual patron to decide for himself.

Kiva Hoffman, one of Hollywood's new makeup artists, will appear on the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater at 6:20 and 9 p. m. this evening as a special added attraction in conjunction with the regular stage bill, headlined by Eddie Garr. Hoffman will offer a brief performance, billed under the title of "From Dawn to Evening," in which he will demonstrate with a living model how milady can achieve the effects of the beauticians with surprising ease and amazing results. I have a suspicion it won't prove as easy as it looks.

* * * *

Speaking of beauty, next week's bill at the Palace will include a short subject that will knock both the ladies' eyes and their husbands' pocketbooks out. It is Truman Talley's advance fashion revue in Technicolor, featuring all of the most beautiful and most famous professional models you are accustomed to see on billboards, in cigarette ads, on magazine covers, etc.

These beautiful young mannequins are adorned with the latest creations of the style masters, executed in lace, wool, silk and velvet, with a few million-dollar gem sets and a carload of fabulous furs thrown in for good measure. The eye-bulger also was previewed yesterday and is guaranteed to give anybody palpitation of the bank account—if any.

Pete Smith's "Gridiron Rules" was definitely an anticlimax after that one, but it will be on next week's bill, too. So now you know it all.

* * * *

The Stroud Twins, Clarence and Claude, have been booked as the headliners of the stage bill at the Earle Theater the week of Friday, October 21. These young comics have become vastly popular over the air on that Sunday night program with Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy and the rest. During their week on Thirteenth street they will present a special skit, said to be dripping with typical Stroud humor. The Earl Roxyettes will be back on the same bill.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 11.—Not since Stokowski spent $13,000 for new sound equipment, which enabled him to give two concerts at the Pan-Pacific Auditorium, has there been such excitement as the other night when the new Ice Follies of 1939 made its debut. What a show! What a crowd! And success. You could list any name in town and would not be wrong. And to think you'll all be able to see it in Metro's picture "Ice Follies," with Joan Crawford, Jimmy Stewart and Lew Ayres thrown in.

HEDDA HOPPER

After the show, Hollywood slid itself out on ice skates. The fun began. Joan Crawford wore a stricken look when her blades struck. She was between two regulars. Cesar Romero does better in a ballroom. Ronald Reagan used to skate on a lake back home so he was okay. So was Elsie Janis. We all dented her ice pond years back—back when Mary Pickford was Mrs. Owen Moore. The Eugene Zukors and Bob Hope were a little uncertain but remained upright. Heather Thatcher, monocled, tight-skirted, never quite got the right pitch.

Sex appeal Jean Sablon got as far as a hot dog. Edgar Bergen, turtle neck sweatered to the ears, was sorry he hadn't put Charlie McCarthy on skates instead.

Harry Cohen said: "I flew in from New York just to see these million dollar babies fall on their faces."

Yes, sir, give us a good skate, and we're off in a cloud of ice.

What director goes musical at the oddest moments? Answer: Leo McCarey. He was in midst of a turkish bath when he got the urge to play the piano. You're right—they rolled in a portable—he went to it. You know, Leo, if you got a guttar it would save trouble.

John Payne and Ann Shirley went New Yorking and arranged their own personal appearances without studio blessing. They are now on way to Roanoke, Va., to meet his family. It will be Shirley's introduction.

When Gail Patrick and hubby, Bob Cobb, pull out for the big town, Gail will be taking her second train ride. To make sure they'd like it, they went down to streamliner and loked over their accomodations before buying a ticket. You know, Gail is a flying fool, and our best dressed air ad.

While Sylvia Sidney and Leif Erikson make "One Third Of A Nation," with Bill Howard on Long Island, their better halves, Frances Farmer and Luther Adler, are in Chicago doing "Golden Boy." They make flying leaps to each other over week-ends.

Wally Westmore says only place an upswing hairdo looks well is in your bathroom. My hairdresser, John, who's moved over to Ann Meredith's, says if properly done it's becoming to any women with a neck and hair.

What a struggle the studios would have had supplying wigs for costume pictures if war had gone through. Most hair comes from Czechoslovakia. Enters like an emigrant through Ellis Island and remains in quarantine until germ shoppers give it once over.

As Joan Fontaine and Olivia de Havilland were dining with Conrad Nagel at Brown Derby, a dear old lady came over to get Conrad's autograph. He said: "But don't you want theirs?"

"I don't think so, who are they?"

Brothers Separated Many Years Reunited By Boy Star on Set

Freddie Bartholomew was instrumental in reuniting two brothers who had not seen each other in 20 years.

Sergt. Maj. Charles J. Read of the famous Ninety-third Division of Negro troops, was a visitor on the set of "Listen, Darling." When Freddie learned his name, he remarked that the Bartholomew chauffeur's name was Edward Read.

Sergt. Read's eyes opened wide.

"I wonder . . ." he started, and then explained, as if his thought was an impossibility: "My brother's name is Edward. I haven't seen him since he was 7 years old."

Freddie put in a hurried telephone call for his chauffeur. Yes, he had a brother named Charles. Fifteen minutes later the two men were having a reunion. When Charles enlisted, Edward had left home to make his own way and lighten the family burden. Charles returned from France minus one leg. He wore a medal on his chest for bravery, but Edward never knew—until that reunion on the set.

Fifth Teaming

"Sweethearts" represents the fifth teaming of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Frank Morgan, who leads the featured cast; Director W. S. Van Dyke and Hunt Stromberg were all associated with the two stars in their first hit musical, "Naughty Marietta," which was also from the pen of Victor Herbert.

Pa and Ma Divide Care of Children

Between scenes of "The Shining Hour," Melvyn Douglas engaged in studying interior decorating. The reason was that the actor was to move into his new home within two weeks and so personally selected the furniture and decorations for his tiny son's room. The selection of nursery furniture for the daughter, Mary Helen, however, was left to his wife, Helen Gahagan. Douglas says he feels that his taste is only for the masculine members of the family.

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 11.

". . . and I'm glad you took me to the game at West Point . . . Of course, I liked it, dear . . . What? . . . I wasn't watching the game? . . . Well, I was taking a look at what we're not raising our boy to be."

12 P. M. "Remember Red Williams?" a detective reveals at the Paradise. "He was Dewey's witness in the Hines case, switched his story, denied signing statements and insisted he couldn't read or write. Well, Dewey now has a letter Williams wrote to his girl, from the Tombs, two days later" . . . "The Metropolitan Opera," a musician declares at the Casanova, "is interested in making an American opera out of Edna Ferber's autobiography, 'A Peculiar Treasure'" . . . "I'll hang up my gloves in a year," Tommy Farr assures at the Cotton Club, "and open an East Side cafe" . . . Tony Galento stares at the 20 empty beer bottles in front of him, and asks to be photographed . . . "Tell the audience something about our company, Paramount," George Raft invites Roscoe Karns—who then announces: "After six years—they fired me today."

1 A. M. "A. C. Blumenthal has offered his wife, Peggy Fears, $50,000 to settle her suit," an agent reports at the Havana-Madrid. "She wants $70,000. And if she gets it, she'll produce another play" . . . "Irs Hirschmann, the department-store executive, who conducted LaGuardia's mayoralty campaign," a municipal official states at the Casa Manana, "will devote his full time now to aid Lehman's campaign" . . . "Did you know," a reporter informs at the Cavalier, "that former District Attorney Dodge was to have got a Supreme Court judgeship here, until he was involved in the Hines case?" . . . At Madison and Fifty-fourth, Patrolman No. 4741 shouts "Hy'a Elly?" Eleanor Holm turns, and recognizes Patrolman Kelly—who was on the Olympic water polo team.

2 A. M. "RKO is in receivership, you know," Paul Stewart tells Hank Greenberg at the Tavern. "Well, Groucho Marx was asked if he knew the meaning of the Morse code tappings which always precede the showing of an RKO picture. 'Sure,' said Groucho. 'It means help'" . . . "Walt Disney," Jesse Block relates, "never has trouble with his actors' contracts. If he has any trouble with an actor, Disney doesn't tear up the contract. He tears up the actor" . . . "Jack Warner, jr., went to London and phoned the Warner office there," a film official reports at the Tokay. "The operator's voice was unintelligible. He asked for the manager—whose voice was also muffled and unintelligible. The manager later told him why: 'It was the day for gas mask practice.'"

3 A. M. "I came down here to spend some money," William S. Hart laments at Barney Gallant's, "but your patrons keep sending over to my table more than I can ever eat or drink" . . . At Tony's Franchot Tone's mother seats herself at her favorite spot directly under the caricature of her former daughter-in-law, Joan Crawford . . . "Last year the papers wrote all about the tremendous winnings of Art Rooney," a sportsman reveals at The Famous Door. "But this year—not a line about Rooney's huge losses." . . . Sewell Tyng, Dewey's assistant, stands at the Stork Club bar—5 feet away from Lyon Boston, the witness whose cross-examination caused a mistrial of the Hitler case.

4 A. M. "Check on this," a physician states at La Conga, "and see if Dr. Hugh Sabot, the eminent surgeon, isn't with the Mayo Clinic any more—because of his recent statement regarding medical help for everybody" . . . "Edwin Carewe, the veteran movie director, has quit the movies forever," Eddy Duchin is told at the Kit Kat. "Instead, he's put all his dough in a new color-process for film" . . . "As campaign fodder," a producer informs at Leon & Eddie's, "the Republicans here will flash a letter of congratulations written by a Democratic chief to Paul Coulcher, the convicted restaurant-union racketeer, when he was elected to head the union."

5 A. M. "I just got this from Spain," a reporter relates at Lindy's. "Remember the Canadian northwoods Indian guide who was named in the famous Stillman case years ago? He's a stretcher-bearer now, in the Fifteenth International Brigade, serving under Dr. Hene. He fought on the Ebro front" . . . "When I go to Detroit Monday," Jack Doyle confesses at Reuben's, "I'll get Mrs. Delphine Dodge, take her to Reno for her divorce and then we'll settle in California. I don't care what the papers write about me—so long as they write about me" . . . Doyle spies Horace Dodge, brother of Delphine, confers with him and then is distraught—because the waiting news photographers didn't take the picture of him and Dodge. "We were waiting for the real picture," a cameraman explains—"of Dodge socking you!"

6 A. M. ". . . No, I won't accept that parrot . . . What? . . . In the baby's room? . . . Oh, no. Besides if the parrot's as imitative as they say, and we put it in his room—what'll we do with a bird that keeps saying 'Da-Da' all the time?"

Star's Son Enrolls In Screen 'School'

Ambitious to follow in his father's footsteps by carrying on the tradition of the theater in his family, Edward Arnold, jr., has enrolled in dramatic school.

The dramatic school that young Arnold entered is serving a dual purpose. It is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Dramatic School," starring Luise Rainer, which also is giving the rudiments of actual dramatic training to thirty-five promising young actresses and actors who play the roles of students.

Mervyn LeRoy, producer of the picture, made his final selections, from more than 200 candidates, of those he believes have the greatest promise of advancing in motion pictures.

Beauty

Buckeye State Captures 2 Beauty Crowns

Both Figures Fine Exercising Counts One in Venus' Class

By Ida Jean Kain.

THIS YEAR'S crop of peaches come from the Buckeye State. Both Mrs. and Miss America, 1938, are Ohio girls.

Miss Marilyn Meseke, who is from Marion, won the title of beauty queen at Atlantic City in competition with 44 girls from 22 States and 22 cities. Mrs. Margaret Chamberlain was crowned Mrs. America at the Palisades Park contest. She is from Cleveland and was the official hostess at the Cleveland Exposition.

It must be quite a feather in a girl's cap to win a beauty contest in her own State. She would have to be good. But to win in competition with winning beauties from all the States you have to be better than good—and these girls are.

You Be Judge

The average Mrs. America will chuckle to learn that Mrs. Chamberlain's figure is every bit as good as Miss Mesekel's—maybe it is a shade better. You be the judges.

	MISS AMERICA	MRS. AMERICA
Height	5 ft. 7 in.	5 ft. 6½ in.
Weight	in shoes, 128 pounds	in shoes, 118 pounds
Bust	34⅝ in.	34 in.
Waist	26 in.	24 in.
Hips	36¾ in.	35 in.
Thigh	21 in.	20 in.
Calf	13 in.	13 in.
Ankle	8 in.	8½ in.

Mrs. America has a 10-inch difference between the bust and the waist, which puts her in the class with Venus. Her figure is ultra-streamlined. Miss America, however, has perfect weight for her structure and her measurements are lovely.

As you may imagine, their activities favor streamlines. Miss Meseke is a dancing instructor and her career affords ample exercise. Dancing is also her hobby, and she has no particular sports preferences. We sometimes think dancing tends to overdevelop the legs, but the new national queen has an extremely well-turned calf and ankle.

Exercise at Play

Mrs. Chamberlain is a model, and her hobbies are swimming, tennis and golf. She takes her exercise in play, and the enjoyment is an incentive to regularity.

Both beauties have sensible health and beauty routines. They like soap and water, sunshine, a good cold cream, plenty of sleep, and the kind of menus that build vitality and beauty instead of too much weight.

Maybe these commonsense programs are the reasons they stand out in a crowd of beauties . . . Or, could it be that Ohio air?

Columnar Gownsfor the Statuesque

Not every one can carry off hoop skirted gowns with the romantic air they require, consequently a number of well bred column-like evening gowns are appearing around town. The mental equilibrium which a simple, adroitly designed gown gives a more conservative woman cannot be equaled by all the panniers and stays of the current season. Normal tendencies in evening attire are asserting themselves in defense of the statuesque woman, who compromises with contemporary fashions in favor of the classic cuts in which she remains happy, as well as comfortable. Illustrated above are two versions of gowns, both smart and consoling to the conventional minded. Right, fan pleated crepe, trimmed only with jeweled clips at the square neckline, and, left, a novel dinner or hostess gown in black velvet and chamois wool, cut for all the world like a man's lumberjacket.

Facial Lines May Be Changed By Corrective Make-up

Demonstrated at Local Beauty Show Based on Light and Shadow Now Is Used in Daytime

By Carolyn Abbott.

THE ART of make-up is old. Helen of Troy and Cleopatra used to so enhance their charms centuries ago. Stars of the stage and screen have applied it to create illusions of beauty for many years.

But the technique of illusionary make-up that is corrective for day street wear has just been made available and practical to all women, according to Kiva Hoffman, expert make-up artist who proved his theory yesterday at the annual Washington Beauty and Style Show by a series of demonstrations in corrective facial make-ups.

Hoffman, who has made up many of the leading stars of Hollywood, says: "Grease paint was used to make up the stars in order to correct certain facial defects and to create the illusion of perfection of beauty or some special character. That make-up was too uncomfortable to wear and too artificial in appearance for practical use. I worked 14 years to make a preparation that creates the same illusion and yet is practical for street wear.

Study Lights and Shadows

"All corrective make-up is a study of shadows and highlights. That is, there are certain areas of the face that are light and others that are dark. We call the dark areas shadows and the lighter areas highlights. Highlights should be emphasized and the shadows played down.

"Any feature of the face may be highlighted or shadowed," he continued. "In fact, the whole contour of the face may be changed by adroit application of rouge, lipstick, shadow base, foundation cream and eyeshadow. A tiny bit of darker foundation applied before the allover foundation in correct skin tones, remodels the conspicuous nose, shadows the heavy jawline, makes the double chin fade into obscurity."

To eliminate or to make less noticeable the lines around the nose and mouth Hoffman suggests that the lines be darkened with a shadow base and blended imperceptibly, then hidden by powder, and that a heavy jawline be softened by applying a dark base in the shadowed area.

Be Sparing With Rouge

Full cheeks may be trimmed down to give the illusion of length by shadowing the fullness and shading with rouge which should be placed high on the cheek bones and blended upward. No highlights should be accentuated around the dark area, he advises.

On the other hand a girl with a thin face should avoid shadows and highlight the dark spots to fill in the hollow places. Be very sparing in the use of rouge, particularly around the pinched places, and apply it lower down on the cheeks, Hoffman suggests.

"Eyes can be given the illusion of length, width, made to look smaller or larger by mascara and eye shadow. All eye-shadow should be applied from the center of the eyelids outward and blended so as to be barely visible," said this authority.

"All street make-up should be natural and inconspicuous. It should be fresh and vitalizing in appearance, not artificial and heavy. Furthermore, it should be corrective, otherwise it will not flatter you.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Oct. 11.

IT IS not yet too late to gather in the fall sports clothes, if we are going to get such a crop, or just jog along with last year's remakes. And after looking over the hangers hither and thither, I find that the old story of stout, sturdy and stylish tweeds is repeating itself.

ALICE HUGHES.

For all around use, whether shopping or football-sitting, there's nothing to touch 'em, now as ever. What's more, they are more attractive than ever this month, for the colors are much brighter and more varied, and many of the cuts get away from the classic and brighten up the autumn scene.

I've never seen so many stripes, big plaids, and multi-colored checks as at present, and they are beautiful and arresting without being so startling as to draw the wide eye and the pointing finger. Plum, grape, wine and green tones seem to be in the highest favor. As for cut, the newest and best is the fingertip length, made in slim, double-breasted coats.

Yep, this fall's tweeds will make any man proud to sit beside you at the home-coming game—even though it is his turn to pay for them!

Lotte Lehmann, the Metropolitan Opera singer, is one of the happiest women in town this fall, for this German, who is Austrian by marriage, has just taken out her first papers for American citizenship. Lotte's a lot of girl. She has written a book, and in addition to her Met season will sing 50 concerts this winter. Don't know how these babies stand it, but they do, and even get huskier and huskier!

Indignant Reader Sees Fundamental Justice in Idea Of Women Going Dutch Treat With Men

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am surprised and disgusted at your reply of October 7 to "Dutch Girl." I have sometimes wondered why you did not advocate the dutch-treat system as a means of enabling the extra girl in Washington to secure a beau, aside from the fundamental justice of the idea . . . But not only do you fail to advocate it, but you stigmatize as "tight fisted and bad mannered" any men who might consider it.

After reading your reply most carefully, I find no justification given for holding a man responsible for paying all expenses, other than that it is considered the socially acceptable thing to do by those who determine social standards. Maybe I am a crude and vulgar person; maybe I am "tight fisted and bad mannered," but I am utterly unable to grasp the reasoning whereby finer spirits than mine can justify such a practice. To my vulgar mind, this custom is merely a hang-over from the cave-dweller era.

The wife and children of the caveman had no property, no rights, no money, no food, nor anything except what the husband and father was willing to give them. This condition of affairs in caveman society now survives in the form which you advocate in your remarks to "Dutch Treat," and it is nothing less than a colossal steal perpetrated by one sex against the other. It is an imposition which the majority of men should resent . . . By your attitude, you encourage both gold digging and snobbery—which need no encouragement, at least not in the social milieu of the Government workers, and perhaps outside of it as well.

I am a professional man, making my living temporarily as a "low paid 'white collar worker'," and girls sometimes break dates with me by failing to appear at the appointed time, and snub me the next time they see me, because they have found out in the meantime that I am only a "low paid 'white collar worker'."

INDIGNANT.

Speaking of Co-operation

DEAR INDIGNANT: Surprised and disgusted you may be with my remarks to "Dutch Treat," but I am no less annoyed by the essentially expedient, unimaginative, mean-minded literalness of that person who would argue that because women today are being forced by socio-economic pressure out of their homes and into the market places as wage earners, they are required and expected either to put their shoulders to the wheel of every traditional masculine obligation, or to ape every traditional masculine gesture

Honorable women of sensitive perception and sturdy caliber need no prompting when it comes to the business of sharing the burdens of their menfolk. To divine and relieve an unspoken need is second nature to them, and they have the happy faculty of making the gesture with such exquisite tact that the burden bearer often does not know either when or how the pack was slipped from his back. Barrie gives us a glimpse of such subtle feminine gallantry in his famous play, "What Every Woman Knows." True, the contribution of the lady in that particular case had not to do with (and was not to be mastered in terms of) dollars and cents, but the principle remains the same.

Whether or not we like it; whether or not it makes what we call sense; whether or not it is a feudalist hangover (although I, personally, invest it with other and more profound significance), the fact indisputably exists and must be dealt with, that the fine-grained man resents, reacts against and psychically shrivels under the implication that he is less than adequate to the male's traditional role of provider and protector. That man is a poor creature, indeed, in every sense of the word, who feels no deep, instinctive need to measure up to such an arrogant concept of his peculiar social value; who is well content to fraternize with the opposite sex on a basis of no quarter asked and none given.

If I have never advocated the dutch-treat system as a means of enabling the extra girl in Washington to secure a beau, it is because I have heard too many men make light of the girl who strains so eagerly after masculine companionship as to be willing to resort to such an expedient to obtain it. The sort of man who seizes on such an arrangement is, all too often, the sort of man who waxes vainglorious in view of the supposed evidence of his irresistible attractiveness and who makes sly wisecracks at the 50-50 girl's expense.

This is not to say, however, that the dutch-treat system may not be a feasible arrangement in special cases, as, for instance, between students on limited allowances at co-educational schools; among tried and true friends, when the man has taken the initiative in precipitating a social interchange, and has given the girl unmistakable evidence of genuine interest and sincere devotion; and with betrothed couples on small incomes who are saving toward marriage and who, by pooling their respective recreational allotments, can have a better time socially than they could on the man's money alone. Yet even in such circumstances considerable diplomacy and restraint is required of the girl if her realistic co-operation is not to react to her romantic disadvantage.

The Post Food Editor.

BREAKFAST

Cream of wheat with top milk
Baked eggs and small sausages
Dry whole wheat wafers
Apple butter
Hot coffee Milk for children

LUNCHEON

Welsh rarebit on toast
Turnip and celery curls
Hot chocolate Apricot sponge

DINNER

Chilled cherry juice
Roast shoulder of lamb, mint sauce
Braised vegetables, fried bananas
Hot muffins, country butter
Hot coffee peach snow

WELSH RAREBIT

Soak 2 cups of bread crumbs and 2 cups of milk in the top of a chafing dish or double boiler for 5 minutes. Add 1 pound of grated American cheese and the following seasonings: 3 tablespoons of Worcestershire sauce, ½ teaspoon of powdered or prepared mustard, ¼ teaspoon of salt and ⅛ teaspoon of pepper. Cook over hot water, stirring occasionally until the cheese is melted. Serve on toast—serves 6.

To Judge Tea

The most valuable teas make a brew that is bright and sparkling. Only the best teas have fine body and fragrance. Top quality black teas have a rich color like that of a new copper coin.

Varied Jackets Mark Season In Hollywood

It's easier to answer all the questions in the movie quiz or guess the starting date of "Gone With the Wind" than to find two jackets alike in Hollywood. Except that all are sleek enough to be worn under coats, each implies "I am different."

Olivia de Havilland is a feminine bellboy in sage green wool jacket which ends at high waistline and buttons in dull gold discs. It isn't even bulky under a princess coat.

An aqua velveteen lumber jacket hugs Jane Bryan in "Brother Rat." She wears it with gray tweed skirt and reefer. In her personal wardrobe there's a stunning cerise suede Eton with waistcoat points. Janet Shaw likes a plaid basque jacket that smacks of Elsie Dinsmore's day. Every seam is piped in black braid as is its matching beret.

Short Dance Skirt

Rosemary Lane does her Lambeth walking in a gown that's shorter than the convention. It's all because Milo Anderson, who designed it for her, is convinced that activity of the new dances should snip autumn evening gowns away at the ankles. Rosemary's dress is of blue taffeta, ankle length and full skirted.

General and Mrs. Herr Receive Cavalry Aides

Fete Is Held at Army-Navy Club
Mrs. DeWitt, Mrs. Hawkins, Mrs. Beck There
Also Mrs. Kent, Mrs. Cheves and Mrs. Newman

Over the rolling hills of Virginia yesterday evening, just as the moon began to glow in the afterdusk, wound myriads of cars to the Army-Navy Country Club.

Officers of the United States Cavalry stationed in and near Washington and their wives arrived practically 100 per cent to greet their host and hostess, Maj. Gen. John K. Herr, chief of cavalry, and Mrs. Herr, at their first reception of the fall.

Mrs. Herr received with the general in the main dining room of the club. She had chosen for the occasion a black matellasse dinner gown fashioned with a high neck, and a long sleeved overjacket, which was appliqued in irridescent sequins. A corsage of gardenias and pearl ear rings completed her costume.

Miss Fay Herr, Ge. and Mrs. Herr's daughter, assisted in receiving and wore a rubonnet gown of taffeta faille, floor length and fashioned in wide flaring princess lines. It had a square neck line, short puffed sleeves and a row of tiny buttons from the neck line to the waist. With this she wore a corsage of gardenias and accessories of pearl.

• • • •

ASSISTING at the tea tables were Mrs. John De Witt, wife of Maj. Gen. De Witt, commandant of the Army War College at Fort Humphries; Mrs. Hamilton Hawkins, wife of Brig. Gen. Hawkins; Mrs. Robert McC. Beck, wife of the newly appointed Maj. Gen. Beck; Mrs. Guy Kent, wife of Col. Kent; Mrs. Cheves, wife of Maj. Gilbert Cheves, and Mrs. Newman, wife of Maj. Richard Newman.

General and Mrs. Herr returned to Washington last Tuesday. They had been attending the Piping Rock horse show at Long Island, and while there were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey D. Gibson. Mr. Gibson is president of the Piping Rock Association.

Though Mrs. Herr has had a rush schedule ever since her return, she takes it in her stride and seems to love it. She has entertained constantly all week at small gatherings and at present she and the general have as their house guest, Gen. Herr's brother, Col. Frederick Herr. He is here for a short visit before sailing on November 15 from New York for his new station in Hawaii.

TWO WHITE HOUSE aides were among those present, one, just off duty, resplendent in blues and gold braid. They were Capt. Hugh Waddell and Lieut. Fletcher Cole. Also noticed were Gen. Leon Kromer, retired, former Chief of Cavalry; Col. and Mrs. George Hunter, Col. and Mrs. William Gordon, Col. and Mrs. Benjamin Grimes, and Col. and Mrs. Wilfred Blount, from Fort Sheridan, Wyo., who are here for a short visit and are house guests of Col. and Mrs. Grimes.

Glimpsed here and there . . . Miss Nancy Hawkins, daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Hamilton Hawkins. She wore a black velvet tea gown, with a collar of delicate chantilly lace, and a small black turban with a veil . . . Mrs. Hoge, gife of Capt. Kenneth G. Hoge. (He's a famed rider and took part in the show at Piping Rock.) She was in a brown floor-length gown, accented with gold, and wore a pill box hat with a ribbon under the chin . . . Mrs. John Milliken, serving at the tea table and wearing all black. A large belt buckle of wisted gold rope gave an excellent accent to her costume . . . Mrs. Jonathan Wainwright, also at the tea table, wearing the unusual and effective combination of black with dubonnet hat and accessories . . .

Col. Champsaur And Dr. Wang Cancel Sailings

Dr. C. T. Wang, Chinese Ambassador here until a week or so ago, was to have sailed for Europe today on the Normandie, but canceled his passage. He will sail as soon as he finishes some business in New York.

Col. Norbert Champsaur, retiring Air Attache of the French Embassy, has postponed for the second time his return to France. He was to have sailed yesterday on the Normandie with Mme. Champsaur. Now he expects to embark October 22 on the Champlain.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller To Live in Capital

Mr. and Mrs. Lambert Henry Miller, now on their wedding trip, will make their home in Washington.

The former Miss Jane Brigham Cline, daughter of the late Managing Editor of the Washington Star and Mrs. Sheldon S. Cline, was married to Mr. Miller October 8 at the Presbyterian Church at Falls Church with the Rev. Alton B. Altfather officiating. Mr. Miller is the son of Mrs. William B. Miller and the late Mr. Miller, of Groton, S. Dak.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, John E. Cline, wore a street-length gown of royal blue vlevet with a small black hat and face veil. And old-fashioned locket, a family heirloom, was her only ornament. Her younger sister, Miss Ann Cline, her only attendant, wore fuschai crepe and carried a mixed bouquet.

Alvin C. Schlenker, of Washington, was best man and the ushers were Leonard Fisher, Charles Helmick, Dr. Monroe Palmer and Sheldon S. Cline. Following the ceremony there was a small reception.

Mr. Miller attended the University of South Dakota, received his A. B. degree at George Washington, his L. L. B. and L. L. M. at National University. He is a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

Dominical Minister To Mexico Here

Teodulo Pina Chevalier, Minister of the Dominican Republic in Mexico, was a guest of the Legation in Washington for a few hours Monday.

He continued his trip to Mexico City accompanied by Andres Pastoriza, jr., and Tomas aPstoriza, sons of the Dominican Minister in Washington, who will be Mr. Pina Chevalier's guests for a few weeks.

Mrs. Rhonie Caheen Wed to Sylvan King

Mrs. Amelia Ullman has announced the marriage of her daughter, Mrs. Rhonie Ullman Caheen, to Sylvan King. Both Mrs. Caheen and Mr. King are of Washington.

Dr. William Rosenau officiated at the ceremony which took place in Baltimore, October 10.

Mrs. Longworth Visits Brother

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who began her lecture tour last week in Greenwich, Conn., is now staying with her brother and sister-in-law, Col. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, at Old Orchard, their home in Oyster Bay, Long Island.

At a rumored price of $2,500 per appearance, "Princess Alice" will tour the country this fall and winter, speaking on "The American People and Their Government."

Her tour, which is her first, is cloaked with mystery, for some unfathomable reason. Her itinerary has not been announced, although besides Greenwich, it is known to include fashionable Evanston, Ill.

At her recent appearance, which was before the Greenwich Women's Club, reporters were barred and the club president warned the 300 women not to take any notes or repeat outside what Mrs. Longworth said. But since women are notoriously unable to keep secrets it was not long before the Stamford Advocate, Republican newspaper, came out with a more or less complete report of her speech, which, in the vein of the newspaper column Mrs. Longworth once conducted, was generally anti-Administration.

House Where 4 Were Slain in 1931 Remains Vacant

Berlin, Md., Oct. 11 (AP).—Seven years ago today a neighbor found the blood spattered bodies of Green K. Davis, his wife and two daughters—and the house has been vacant ever since. The two floor frame house at Taylorsville, 3 miles east of here, has been examined by many prospective tenants, but they turned away on hearing stories of the slaying.

Davis and his wife were found dead in their bed in an upper floor bedroom. In an adjoining room his two daughters lay dead. They had been shot and bludgeoned.

Euel Lee, a Virginia colored farm hand, was accused of the crime and fought for his life in seven courts, including the U. S. Supreme Court, before he was hanged for the quadruple slaying in October, 1933.

Two Luray Felons Twist Bars, Flee

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., Oct. 11.—Digging out after twisting the bars of their cells this morning, two Luray prisoners were being hunted this afternoon. The two are Elwood Pleasants, of Waynesboro, Va., convicted of larceny and sentenced to one year, and Irvington Pitts, colored, of Luray, sentenced to four years for bigamy.

Brother Seized In Va. Slaying

Powhatan, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—Commonwealth's Attorney Robert R. Jones said today he would question Alfred Richie sometime this week in connection with the murder of his brother, Joe Richie, found dead in his bed about a week ago.

Sheriff W. F. Simpson said he found a pocketbook which Joe Richie reported stolen more than two years ago. The sheriff said that at the time Richie reported the robbery, he said there was more than $1,200 in the pocketbook.

Elkton Slaying Inquest Called

Elkton, Md., Oct. 11 (AP).—An inquest into the slaying of James Goodyear by his brother, John, 38, will be held tomorrow night at the courthouse.

Dr. R. C. Dodson, coroner for Cecil County, said tonight he had called as witnesses two other brothers but their mother, an invalid with whom the slain man allegedly quarreled the day of the shooting, was too infirm to be called.

James, 43, and a World War veteran was shot October 1.

Harriet Hunt Picks Oct. 21

Miss Harriet Louise Hunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Hunt, has relected October 21 as the date of her wedding to Dos Taylor Hatfield, son of Judge and Mrs. Charles S. Hatfield, also of Washington.

The ceremony will take place at 4:30 o'clock at All Souls' Church, the Rev. U. G. B. Pierce officiating. A reception at the home of Mrs. and Mrs. Thomas L. Stokes, jr., brother-in-law and sister of the bride, at 2019 Hillyer place, will follow the ceremony.

Miss Hunt will have as her matron of honor Mrs. William M. Connors, and Miss Hope Hunt, another sister, will serve as maid of honor. Miss Norma Hatfield, sister of the bridegroom, will be bridesmaid.

William Washburn, of Youngstown, Ohio, will be best man, and the ushers are David Hunt, brother of the bride; Edmund Perry, Charles Proctor, Richard Schulze, Jerome Skehan and Richard Kirkland.

The couple will live near McLean, Va.

Miss Hunt attended De Pauw University in Greencastle, Ind., and King's College, University of London. Mr. Hatfield is a graduate of American University and National University Law School.

Holdrege Garage Scene Of Gay Party

Moved in Recently
'Reminds Us of Paris'
Fetes Count, Countess

The remodeled garage into which Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege recently moved "because it reminds us of Paris," was the scene of a gay cocktail party yesteday when they entertained in honor of Count and Countess Casagrande, of New York, who have been visiting Washington for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Holdrege returned to Washington to live las January after a long residence in Paris. They made their home at 2101 Connecticut avenue until moving to their new house on Decatur place.

Among the guests yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Vincent Benet, who lived a long time in the French capital; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy, Rear Admiral Charles Courtney, Dr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Effingham Townsend and Mrs. John Dwight.

Count and Countess Casagrande will leave today to return to New York. They knew Mr. and Mrs. Holdrege when they lived in Paris.

Harrisons Take D. C. Apartment For the Winter

Mr. and Mrs. B. Powell Harrison and their debutante daughter, Miss Laura Harrison, of Leesburg, have come to Washington and have taken an apartment at 1511 Twenty-second street for the winter.

Miss Harrison was presented to Virginia society at Middleburg the latter part of September and expects to make her debut at the Bachelors' Cotillion in Baltimore December 5.

Wedding Plans Set For Anne Clarkson

Miss Anne Elise Clarkson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Clarkson, has completed plans for her wedding at 4 o'clock on Saturday afternoon to T. Loehl O'Brien, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. O'Brien, also of Washington.

The ceremony will take place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarkson at 3120 Woodley road, the Rev. Thomas Moran officiating. A small reception will follow.

Miss Catherine Bright will serve as Miss Clarkson's maid of honor and only attendant, and John L. Porter will be best man.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding will include Mr. and Mrs. F. E. O'Brien and Mr. and Mrs. M. J. O'Brien, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Burwell and Miss Eleanor Burwell, of Parkersburg, W. Va., and Lieut. and Mrs. H. S. Williams, of Langley Field, Va.

McCormick-Goodharts Back From Bar Harbor

Mr. and Mrs. F. Hamilton McCormick-Goodhart have returned from Bar Harbor and have taken an apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel for the next few months.

Mrs. Robbins Host To Mother, Here From Argentina

Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins entertained at a small tea yesterday afternoon for her mother, Mme. de Bruyn, who has come from her home in the Argentine for a visit with her daughter at the latter's residence on R street. Mrs. Robbins will entertain again tonight at dinner for Mme. de Bruyn, who will spend her stay here in a constant round of dinners and teas.

Mme. de Bruyn will be in Washington until a week from tomorrow, when she will go to New York. From there she will sail on Saturday, October 22, for a shopping tour in Paris, after which she will return to the Argentine.

Lora-Marie Hoover Back From Europe

Miss Lora-Marie Hoover, daughdaughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Hoover, of California street, has joined her parents here after spending the past few days in New York following her arrival there October 7, from Europe.

She traveled through Europe en route from a year's visit in Manila. During this winter, Miss Hoover plans to study languages and fine arts and will be here through the season.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Engle, of Chattanooga, Tenn., are at the Hotel Roosevelt.

The Pulvers Hosts to Fans AtBackgammon

First Fall Tournament
16 Players Present
Entertained at Dinner

Washington society's backgammon enthusiasts, a group which is small but very enthusiastic, met last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Pulver for their first autumn tournament.

There were 16 players present, half of whom had been entertained at dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Pulver. The others were guests of Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., in her attractive apartment at 1302 Eighteenth street. Staying with Mrs. Summerlin for a few days is Mrs. Henry S. Thorne, who lived in Washington until she moved to Darien, Conn., a year or so ago.

The players gathered in the large room on the top floor of the Pulver residence in Georgetown. Partners were decided on by drawing, and the first eight losers got together in a consolation tournament. Prizes were awarded at the end of the evening.

Washington backgammon devotees include Lady Lewis, Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, Mrs. Higginson Rogers, and Christopher Bramwell and Benjamin Plunket of the British Embassy.

Mr. and Mrs. Pulver, who have leased their house to Arthur Krock for the winter, will leave November 1 for Southern Pines, S. C., to spend the winter.

Frances Parsley Becomes Wife Of George Darrell Trundle

Married in Evening at St. Stephen and Incarnation
Attendants Are Garbed in Hoop-Skirt Frocks
Couple Will Live Here After Wedding Tour

The Church of Saint Stephen and the Incarnation yesterday evening was the scene of the wedding of Miss Frances Muriel Parsley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Parsley, and George Darrell Trundle, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas I. Trundle. The Rev. Paul D. Wilbur officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory slipper satin, made with a heart-shaped neckline, fashioned on princess lines, and with leg-o'-mutton sleves which were cought tightly from wrist to elbow. Her tulle veil, falling to the ends of the long train, was held by a halo of tulle and seed pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Attendants Wear Hoop-Skirt Frocks

Altmeyer Sees Security Act Broadening

1.3 Billions Paid Out Revisions Explained At Catholic Session

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 11.—A. J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, told the National Conference of Catholic Charities here tonight that more than $1,300,000,000 had been paid by September, 1938, to beneficiaries of the social security act.

"There can be no question," he said, "as to what this has meant in terms of security, in terms of want and fear forestalled, to the individuals and families these payments have helped to keep going."

The chairman said that "while the social security act in its present form has proved to be fundamentally sound and effective, nevertheless, like all forms of social legislation, it cannot be considered final or complete. As time goes on there will unquestionably be a broadening of existing provisions as well as some additions."

Completing Report

The board, he said, was at work on those problems and hoped soon to make a report.

The board has approved an amendment to the old-age insurance section of the act, which has been submitted to Congress, removing the requirement that a worker's wage credits stop at 65, he said. Under this amendment, a worker's credits would accumulate as long as he is at work on any job covered by the act, so that if his sixty-fifth birthday comes along before he has had time to qualify for an annuity, his wages after 65 could continue to count until he decided to retire, and thus be able to earn a monthly annuity instead of being limited to a single cash payment.

The board is studying the question of lowering the retirement age, which involves counting the increased cost, he said.

Moral Issues Cited

Earlier the Nation's Catholic welfare workers were urged to supplement their professional equipment with contributions which the "cultural background of the Catholic religion may provide for them in their relationships with their clients."

"This is necessary because social work fundamentally touches vital points of moral issues," the Rev. Albert J. Murphy, Ph. D., of Washington, assistant secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, asserted in an address this afternoon.

Frank Van Dyk, executive director of the Associated Hospital Service of New York, told the conference committee on health that if voluntary health insurance is to succeed and offset the "necessity of compulsory insurance under governmental auspices, it must have the co-operation of the medical profession in including medical service as well as hospital care."

Van Dyk said that 85 per centof persons enrolling in nonprofit hospital care insurance plans are those who earn less than $3,000 per year.

Miss Florence Sullivan, field representative of the United States Children's Bureau, Washington, told the committee on children that child welfare services under the social security act do not advocate any particular type of organization or administration.

Page Board Turns Down Plea to Feed Needy Students

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., Oct. 11.—Welfare problems engaged the attention of the Page County Board of Supervisors at an all-day meeting yesterday.

Delegations from Luray, Stanley and Shenandoah civic groups appeared before the board and asked restoration of the WPA sewing room, recently eliminated by the Board of Public Welfare. The supervisors also were asked to contribute $25 a month to each high school to feed needy children.

Both proposals were turned down by the county board, which claimed lack of funds.

Action on medical aid for paupers was deferred by the board pending a legal opinion. Prior to the establishment of the welfare unit, the Board of Supervisors paid county physicians $1,000 a year to care for ill paupers. Under the recent setup the County Welfare Board has refused to continue the medical aid to indigent, throwing the matter again into the hands of the supervisors.

Leesburg, Va., dispolal plant, $67,500.

The Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Old Naturalist Explains

When to the truth and facts you're blind
A mystery you're sure to find.
—The Old Naturalist.

The Old Naturalist is right. A mystery is simply a lack of knowledge of certain facts on the part of the one who cannot understand how certain things can be or have been brought about. Life is full of mysteries, but the more general knowledge we possess the fewer become the mysteries. As soon as the true facts are understood there no longer is mystery. That which is mystery to me may be nothing of the kind to you, or it may be the other way around.

Tommy, Sue and Sammy had just witnessed something that it would have been difficult for them to believe, had not the act been performed right under their very eyes. A small Wasp had closed her house in the ground in a most amazing manner. Over the entrance she had placed a little pebble that just fitted the opening. Over this she had brushed loose soil until the pebble was wholly covered. Then she had picked up another small stone in her jaws and with this had pounded that loose soil over her home until it was as firm as the surrounding earth. She actually had made a tool of that pebble. Pounding the earth in this manner to make it firm is called tamping. You have seen it done by men many times.

"Did you find out about this all yourself?" Sue wanted to know.

The Old Naturalist shook his head. "No," said he. "It was discovered by certain famous entomologists."

"What are they?" interrupted Sammy.

"Folks who made a special study of insects," was the smiling response. "I read about what others had seen this kind of a Wasp do, and then I hunted and wasn't satisfied until I had seen for myself what you have just seen—an insect making use of a tool."

"What did she put that caterpillar down in that hole for?" Sammy wanted to know.

"Food for the baby that will hatch from the egg she placed with that caterpillar," replied the Old Naturalist.

"She goes to an awful lot of work to hide her home. I don't see why. Whoever would notice that little hole in the ground? And what enemy would take the trouble to dig it open if it was found?" asked Tommy.

"I don't know for certain, but I suspect that she isn't afraid of having that nursery dug open. By the way, a nursery is what it is, for she doesn't live there herself. It is for her children only. I suspect that she is afraid of unwanted guests, other insects that might like such a nice home or caterpillars. There are others who will hunt nothing but Spiders. One naturalist who has spent much time studying Wasps tells of one that was hunting a certain kind of Spider that was very clever in hiding. But the Wasp was even more clever. She would tangle herself in the Spider's web. Of course the latter would rush out to see what had been caught. Thereupon the Wasp would break the threads of her web, seize the Spider and carry her off. How's that?"

"Pretty smart," replied Tommy. "Would you call that intelligence or instinct?"

whose children might like to dine on young Wasps as well as the latter like to dine on caterpillars. Such would be looking for open doors and would be likely to find any such. Anyway, you may be sure that Mrs. Wasp has some very good reason for taking such pains to hide the location of her children's home," explained the Old Naturalist.

"Do you suppose she puts anything but caterpillars in there for food?" asked Sue.

"Probably not," replied the Old Naturalist. "There are many kinds of Wasps, just as there are many kinds of Bees and Ants. Just as some birds eat seeds and some eat insects and some are meat eaters and some live mostly on fish, so different kinds of Wasps provide different kinds of food for their young. The big Digger Wasp has a preference for Cicadas as infant food. This little Wasp must have

Spent $2,000 On Campaign, O'Conor Says

Brune Charge 'Untrue' Friends Spent Rest Law Violation Denied

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 11.—Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor drew a legal line between a political candidate and the candidate's financial backers today, in describing as "untrue, impertinent and scandalous" a charge he violated the State corrupt practices act by spending $69,263 in his recent successful campaign for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

The charge was made by Herbert M. Brune, jr., independent gubernatorial candidate, in a petition filed in Superior Court yesterday accusing O'Conor of spending about $65,000 more than he should have spent under the law.

Brune, and nine other petitioners, asserted O'Conor should not have spent more than $4,250, since the statute specifies campaign expenditures are limited by a scale based on the number of voters eligible to cast ballots.

O'Conor filed an answer and a demurrer to the action, denying he had violated the law, and contending his report of campaign expenditures showed he personally had spent only $2,000. Under the "uniform practical interpretation" of the corrupt practices act, the answer stated, O'Conor was not violating the law when his backers spent more than $67,000 in addition.

Oficials Value Greenbelt at $3,257,010

Only 150 Acres Count County to Get $42,000 Park Land Untaxable

Greenbelt, Md., the Federal Government's model community in Prince Georges County yesterday was evaluated at $3,257,010.

The official evaluation was agreed upon at a meeting at Upper Marlboro between the county commissioners and officials of the Farm Security Administration, which has charge of the low-cost housing development.

Purpose of the evaluation is to provide a basis for dethermining how much the town shall pay to the county and State for public services.

As a Federal community, the town is exempt from direct taxation but under the Bankhead-Black act, payments may be made to the county and State "in lieu of taxes."

To Pay About $42,000

By applying the present county tax rate—$1.18 on each $100 of real property—to the $3,257,000 Greenbelt assessable basis, the county this year will be entitled to a payment from the Farm Security Administration of approximately $40,000.

In addition, Thomas W. Baxter, supervisor of assessments, was authorized to assess Greenbelt residents on their personal property. This will provide another estimated $2,000 for the county treasury.

The State will derive thus from the Federal community a sum equivalent to a tax of 23 cents on each $100 of real property.

150 Acres Taxable

Greenbelt, first suburban housing project started by the Resettlement Administration, cost originally about $15,000,000, but this figure includes cost of the land, including 13,000 additional acres outside the town's limits and the cost of constructing streets, public buildings and schools.

In arriving at the $3,257,000 figure, Hugo C. Schwartz, head of the public finance division of the Farm Security Administration, said only 150 acres within the Greenbelt corporate limits were taken into account. The rest of the area is park land and not taxable, he said.

The evaluation, he said, also exempts the road system, the administration buildings, the two schools, and the artificial lake, all of which would be exempt if a direct tax were levied on the town.

Land Worth $1,300 Acre

The 150 acres were evaluated at $204,700 or approximately $1,365 an acre. The residential buildings were evaluated at $3,052,310 or at the rate of 33⅓ cents per cubic foot.

Co-operating with Schwartz in the agreement between the county and Greenbelt were Capt. Vinton D. Cockey, member of the board of commissioners, and Baxter.

Debate Refused, Richmond Mayor Taunts City Aide

Richmond, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—Refusal by City Comptroller T. Coleman Andrews to engage in a debate on municipal affairs prompted Mayor J. Fulmer Bright today to remark that "Mr. Andrews, who is the only man who ever knew how the city could save $1,000,000, won't tell."

Mr. Andrews, former State auditor, declined the invitation to debate with the assertion that "the public is looking to me for performance, and not debate."

Dr. Bright opened a dispute last week with criticism of the comptroller's personal practices in the city water and gas division and with an "apology" on behalf of the city for a remark made by Andrews concerning New Deal spending.

Andrews in reply said the mayor's statement was "a blatant and extravagant piece of humbuggery."

Byron Indorsed By A.F.L. Group

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 11 (AP).—William D. Byron of Williamsport had today the indorsement of the Hagerstown Central Labor Union, an A. F. of L. group, in his campaign for election to the House of Representatives from the Sixth District.

The Democratic nominee who seeks the seat vacated by Representative David J. Lewis to enter the fight for the United States Senate against Senator Tydings, received the indorsement last night.

Byron announced he would go to Washington today to confer with Representative Lewis in an attempt to extend the proposed development of a 22 mile stretch of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal. He said after a study of the Government proposal he was convined the canal recreational area should be extended along the entire length instead of only from Seneca to Washington.

Race Horse Case Of Cleric Settled

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 11.—The case of the Rev. C. Worthington Lowe, who appealed to Corporation Court after Police Magistrate Donald Weems entered judgment in favor of Allen Hummer, Clarke County horseman, for $308.50, has been settled and dismissed from the docket as "agreed," according to an order issued by Judge Philip Williams.

Lowe, suspended pastor of Grace Lutheran Church and now pastor of an independent Lutheran congregation, was sued by Hummer who averred that the pastor broke a contract whereby the plaintiff trained a race horse owned by the cleric.

Aged Waterman Feared Drowned

Crisfield, Md., Oct. 11 (AP).—Posses of watermen searched late today through the marshes and along river banks near Apes Hole landing for Hobson Sterling, 80, whose capsized bateau was found earlier today.

Sterling, a prominent waterman who lived at nearby Asbury, disappeared last week after leaving on a fishing trip. He was accompanied by his collie. Watermen came upon the dog near Apes Hole landing. The animal refused to budge and declined to heed the watermen's calls but continued to gaze out over the water.

What the Government expects a wife to know before she spends her husband's money, it makes pretty plain in two slim little booklets which wives better keep out of their husbands' hands.

One of them, a slim, innocent little 100-pager, lists about 600 books and pamphlets, whose contents a really loyal wife ought to know, all about "commodity buying" and "consumer problems," from comfortable beds to kitchen cutlery. Some are free, some cost 1 cent to $2.

* * * *

And the other is only 56 pages, but it lists 32 different Government agencies with "consumer" services; bureaus which stand ready to whisper things into a wife's ear, presumably things that every girl should know. You didn't suspect you had 32 bureaus fighting for you as a consumer, eh?

"—some wives dislike research"

Some wives, who don't take easily to reading and research, might never get their marketing done if they tried to look up all the available data on canned goods, fresh vegetables and meats before sallying forth to buy the pork chops.

* * * *

These two titles of pamphlets will give you a rough idea: "Consumer-buying in the Educational Program for Home-making" — price, 20 cents, 205 pages; and "Illustrations of Tests for Evaluating Instruction in Some Phases of Consumer Buying." This one, 37 pages long, is free.

* * * *

While other departments (including its own) strive to raise prices and keep them up, it's the Consumers' Counsel Division of the AAA, of the Department of Agriculture (under Director D. E. Montgomery) which strives valiantly to bring prices down. In this crusade it publishes the two booklets just mentioned and numerous others, including a fortnightly magazine.

"—wives in cap and gown"

After poring over a few of these articles and bibliographies, I say without exaggeration that any woman who mastered the data the Government's waving at her would no longer be a housewife; she would be a Doctor of Science and a Doctor of Philosophy, and eligible to don the academic cap and gown whenever she goes shopping.

* * * *

In this very special literature, wound in and around the tips for the removal of gravy stains from hubby's necktie, there's a subtle political philosophy. It's theme is that high prices "destroy the consumer function" of a great part of the population; that "consumers periodically are unable to perform their economic function of buying the things which we produce;" that it is necessary "to wipe out the scourge of underconsumption."

Or, to put it another way, "large numbers of our population have been unable to perform the important economic function assigned to them as consumers."

* * * *

What they really mean is that some people don't have enough money to buy nice things.

The same department which directs this Consumers' Division, this lone voice in the wilderness for more production, lower prices and more consumption, strives in other offices in the same building to reduce production and raise prices.

The Roosevelt Administration's biggest impasse is in the realm of producing more so people could consume more.

Prize Livestock to Parade Prior to Races Opening of Annual Event Draws 8,000 Judging Unfinished as First Day Ends

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 11.—A cavalcade of the prize livestock of this and adjoining counties will parade before the patrons at the Frederick Fair tomorrow prior to the opening of the races. In the procession will be the cream of the entries in all classes, except the draft horse division. Judging will not have been completed in time for the parade.

Approximately 8,000 persons attended the opening today and twice that number are expected tomorrow, when "Farmers Day" will be observed.

Most of the judging was completed today. Entries in all except household, art and fancy work departments were up to or above normal. An increase in the entry fees is thought to have served to reduce the number of entries in the women's departments.

The grounds today were without cash gambling and hootchie kootchie shows for the first time in a number of years. Directors of the agricultural society ordered the prohibition of such concessions and city police were on the grounds to enforce the ruling.

The first night show is scheduled tomorrow night. Another will be held Thursday night. Motorcycle races are to be the big attraction on Friday.

O'Conor Aims To Balance Md. Budget

Talks in Leonardtown Outlay Cut Pledged Nice Regime Assailed

By the Associated Press.

Leonardtown, Md., Oct. 11.—Attorney General Herbert P. O'Conor, Democratic nominee for Governor, pledged himself tonight to present a "sound, sensible and balanced budget" to the next Legislature if he is elected in November.

Leading his campaign bandwagon into St. Marys County, with Leonardtown as the only stop, O'Conor devoted most of his prepared address to a discussion of State fiscal problems which, he asserted, have been "made more difficult by the utter failure of the present Republican administration to meet the actual needs it has faced."

Assails Nice Regime

Gov. Harry W. Nice's administration, he added, "has failed miserably to display the slightest knowledge or understanding of the fiscal affairs of the State and has drifted serenely along on borrowed money and an unbalanced budget."

"I propose," he said, "to stop the practice of mortgaging the future by borrowing to meet current expenses, and instead to keep the current outlay within the bounds of current income. Any other policy will inevitably lead to burdensome debt and waste and extravagance . . ."

Will Study Budget

"I propose . . . to submit to the next General Assembly a sound, sensible and balanced budget," he continued. "This, neither I nor any other person can properly do alone, and I make no pretense or shallow promise to do so. It can only be accomplished after weeks of constant study . . . and . . . consultation . . . and that is the way I propose to approach the matter."

State W. C. T. U. Head Links Crime Gain to Legalized Rum

Va. Convention Opens Mrs. Hoge to Retire Leader for 40 Years

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Purcellville, Va., Oct. 11.—Mrs. Howard M. Hoge, State president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in her address tonight before the fifty-sixth annual convention of the organization, in Purcellville, declared that the legal sales of liquor through the ABC stores has increased drunkennsss and crime. She reinforced her statement by quoting numerous incidents from the press, police reports, articles and statistics bearing on the subject.

The convention opened this morning with the State executive committee meetings and will continue through Wednesday and Thursday. On Thursday evening Mrs. Amy C. Weech, of Washington, D. C., will be the principal speaker. There also will be a diamond medal contest Thursday evening. The final day will feature the election of officers.

Mrs. Hoge said "the sale of legalized liquor has crowded jails in the State," and she cited a report from a police department of one town showing "an increased number of arrests in 1937 over 1936 and stated that the increase came mostly in number of drunken persons arrested." This, Mrs. Hoge compared with a special dispatch from another town which gave the statement of the chief of police that after the closing of the ABC liquor store "only one person is arrested for drunkenness where ten were arrested while the store was operated."

She said: "From the Federal Bureau of Investigation we hear that the ratio of drunkenness per 100,000 of the population doubled from 1932 to 1937; and from the same source we hear that the ratio of arrests for drunkenness has increased in the same time 100.5 per cent.

"Although press reports have given out the impression that there has been a diminution in tha amount of liquor sold, such is not the case in Virginia," she said, and continued: "Figures given me by the ABC Board for the year ended June 30, 1938, show that the board had ten more stores in operation than at the same time the preceding year; the gross receipts were $17,788,326.54, an increase of $844,692.28. The net profits were $4,970,206.88, an increase of $320,678.72."

MRS. HOWARD M. HOGE

Mrs. Hoge, who is retiring after 40 years as president of the State organiaztion, concluded her address by an appeal: "Let us increase our working force with an enlarged membership, and let us increase, too, our regular systematic activities. While the time has come when it is necessary that I retire from the leadership of the organization, you must never think of me as quitting. My heart is in the work and my life is dedicated to the Master."

Mrs. Margaret E. Rigsby

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 11.—Services will be held here tomorrow for Mrs. Margaret Elizabeth Rigsby, 75, widow of Oliver S. Rigsby, who died yesterday. She was a charter member of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Ancient Order of Hibernians, and treasurer since its foundation. She was also active in circles of St. Joseph's Catholic Church.

William T. Boutyard

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 11.—William T. Boutyard, 68, who died at the home of his son, H. J. Boutyard, here yesterday, will be buried tomorrow afternoon. He is survived by two sons, H. J. Boutyard and T. H. Boutyard, of Fredericksburg; a sister, Mrs. Sarah Briscoe, of Washington, and a brother, George, of Stafford County.

Mrs. Bertha E. Bradbury.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 11.—Funeral rites for Mrs. Bertha E. Bradbury, 87, who died here yesterday, after a brief illness, were held this morning. The body was taken to Arlington for interment. Mrs. Bradbury, widow of Sanford Bradbury, of Arlington, is survived by two children, Maj. Eugene Bradbury, of Upperville, and Mrs. Luther M. Walter, of Chicago.

Dr. Crumlish Rites Today at Mt. St. Mary's

Professor for 50 Years Killed by Motor Car Body Lies in State

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emmitsburg, Md., Oct. 11.—Dr. John J. Crumlish, noted educator and professor of Mount Saint Mary's College, who was killed near here early Sunday night when he was struck by an automobile, will be buried from the college chapel, Wednesday morning.

The mountaineer college professor who for over 50 years has been associated with the Mount Saint Mary's College faculty will be buried in St. Anthony's Cemetery overlooking the college grounds.

The body will lie in state at the college until Wednesday morning when it will be moved to the college chapel.

A guard of honor made up of senior classmen of Mount St. Mary's College watched tonight over the body of Dr. Crumlish.

Through the night groups of six seniors alternated while the college students and teachers prepared for the final rites of the Catholic Church.

A solemn requiem mass will be celebrated in the college chapel at 9:30 tomorrow morning by the Right Rev. John Lawrence Sheridan, president of the college. The Rev. Peter A. Coad, the Rev. Ellwood S. Berry and the Rev. William F. Culhane will assist.

The Right Rev. Mgr. John J. Tierney, with whom Dr. Crumlish was closely associated during his long term as teacher of English and Latin, will preach the eulogy.

Dr. Crumlish, 73, was killed by an automobile driven by William Hudson Rhodes, 20, of Emmitsburg, and a student at Gettysburg College.

Dr. Crumlish is survived by his daughter, Sister Mary, a sister of the Charity Order, stationed at St. Joseph College, Emmitsburg, and a son, John, jr., a graduate of Mount Saint Mary's in 1934.

Mrs. Mary B. Spiers

Culpeper, Va., Oct. 11.—Funeral services were held in Culpeper Fairview Cemetery on Sunday afternoon for Mrs. Mary Buckner Spiers, 91, who died at her home here Friday night. She was widely known for her literary activities and had published in book form a collection of her original verse, in addition to numerous prose writings. Her husband, Richard P. Spiers died more than 50 years ago, and since then she had lost three grown children.

Five Road Jobs Are Awarded In Maryland

$180,609 in Projects One in Rockville Frederick Gets 3

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 11.—Contracts for five projects, costing a total of $180,609, were awarded today by the State roads commission.

Largest contract in the group, for concrete surfacing and bridge construction along 1.392 miles of the Liberty road, from North Branch toward Eldersburg, went to the Empire Construction Co., of Baltimore, on a low bid of $141,576.

Next in line was a grading and drainage job along the relocation for approaches to the proposed Fishing Creek bridge, in Calvert County, awarded to Harry T. Campbell & Sons, of Baltimore, on a bid of $18,488.

Two Frederick County projects, one involving the macadamizing of eight-tenths of a mile of the Buffalo road, from near Mount Airy toward West Falls, and the other specifying placing of blacktop surface along 1 mile of the Annapolis road, were awarded.

The first contract went to the M. J. Grove Lime Co., of Lime Kiln, for $5,252, and the second to the Campbell concern for $4,253.

P. Reddington & Sons, of Baltimore, won an $11,040 contract for paving eight-tenths of a mile of Montgomery avenue in Rockville.

The Thomas, Bennett & Hunter Co., of Westminster, was announced as low bidder on a surfacing project along 2.74 miles of the Libertytown-Woodsboro road, in Frederick County, from east of Woodsboror to Libertytown. The bid was $73,924.

The commission awarded one contract, for construction of a timber bulkhead at Chesapeake Beach, to the Joseph A. Lavezza Co., of Baltimore, subject to approval of the Public Works Administration.

Sad Saga of Adolph the Pig Or Pride Precedeth a Fall

By the Associated Press.

Nassawadox, Va., Oct. 11.—Herewith is presented the sorrowful saga of Adolph the pig—an unhappy young animal whose inventiveness was mothered by his own necessities.

Adolph liked to eat.

And Adolph was most always hungry.

This hunger began shortly after his birth. The runt of a large litter, he was handicapped considerably at mealtimes. His brothers and sisters crowded him away from the source of supply. Adolph squawked so loudly about this that a member of the Upshur family, owner of the plantation, Brownsville, filled a pop bottle with milk, stuck a nipple on it and thereby pacified the pig—but only temporarily.

Adolph's capacity grew far beyond the six ounces of a pop bottle.

He looked homeward—but in vain. Brothers and sisters were sticking close to mother.

So one day Adolph wandered away from the pig lot. He wandered over to a meadow and everybody in the Upshur family thought he had just decided to give up. But a few weeks later, Miss Anne Floyd Upshur, while picking figs, sighted Adolph. He was fat and sleek, a new Adolph. Then she found out his secret.

Miss Upshur watched Adolph as he temporarily adopted a ewe. A baby lamb stood by, hungry and disconsolate. Miss Upshur put a stop to that.

And true to proverb, this pride preceded the fall of Adolph.

Folks on the farm said Adolph seemed to think he was just too big for his animal classification. Because:

Visiting Nurses Treat 9,000 Here Since June

The Instructive Visiting Nurse Society cared for 9,021 patients and made 51,429 visits from June through September, the board of directors was told yesterday. The agency continues increased service to maternity cases formerly delivered at Gallinger Hospital, now delivered at home, it was reported.

Colonials and Hoyas Resume Athletic Relations

16 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1938 ★★★

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The Washington Football Writers Association and its assembled guests had charged through a five-course line of edibles with the usual completeness and dispatch. There was a shift to the right for the coffee and the chairman rapped for order.

POVICH.

"Gentlemen, we wil hear from Mr. Ray Flaherty, who coaches a team called the Washinton Redskins, of whom you may have heard. There are reliable reports that Mr. Flaherty's Redskins were guilty of some wrongdoing last Sunday at Griffith Stadium."

The Redskins' coach suffled to his feet and said it was true. His football team was not a good football team last Sunday. "And I understand it is being bruited about, also, that I was not a good football coach last Sunday," continued Flaherty. "Perhaps not, but my defense of myself will be brief and, I think, to the point."

"As far as I was concerned, there was no humor in the situation at Griffith Stadium on Sunday at any time," resumed M. Flaherty. "The Giants made it a very sorry afternoon for us, especially when Burnett intercepted Sammy Baugh's last-period pass. For taking out Bill Hartman and inserting Baugh in that last quarter, I have been criticized. In my own behalf, I can only say that when I sent Baugh in to throw that pass I was taking out a very good passer and putting in the world's best."

Pass for Malone

At this point, a heckler demanded to know why Baugh's pass was directed toward Don Irwin in preference to any one of four or five more proficient pass receivers on the Redskin team.

Flaherty said he could explain that, too. "Irwin didn't quite get to that pass, but the fact is the play originally didn't call for him to take it. Originally it was supposed to be a pass over the line to big Charlie Malone. Those were my orders to Baugh when I sent him in. But it seems I forgot to tell the Giants about it. They knocked Malone down and out of the play right after the ball was snapped."

On his record as a truthful fellow despite his job as a head coach, Flaherty's explanation was accepted and the chairman invited Mr. Frank Dobson, of the University of Maryland, to address the gathering.

Dobson's Brave

There was some surprise when Dobson's name was mentioned for it was believed that the Maryland coach had betaken himself to distant parts following his 53-0 affair against Syracuse last week. There were exactly 53 reasons why Mr. Dobson might have been hiding out in preference to exposing himself to the harsh inquiries of the town's severest football critics. Mr. Dobson, it seems, is a very brave man.

"In my time," began Mr. Dobson, "I have seen Michigan's famous point-a-minute teams and other college teams that could approximate that point production. But last Saturday, at Syracuse, I saw for the first time a point-a-man team. Against Maryland, Syracuse used 53 football players."

Somebody said "Very well, Mr. Dobson. We see your point. You may continue."

"There is little I can add about Maryland," resumed Mr. Dobson. "Syracuse did virtually all of the adding among other things. But what I do want to say is that I have an increasing respect for pro football's rules in contrast to the college rules."

That bit of heresy on the part of a college coach did not go unnoticed. College coahces are not suposed to say kind things about the pros and Mr. Dobson was subtly prodded by the rejoinder of "How come?"

They Buy 'Em!

"Well," said Mr. Dobson, "I have read in the morning paper that because the Redskins' backfield was crippled by injuries and Coach Flaherty was in need of two more backs, Mr. George Marshall went out and bought two more backs. The college coaches could use a rule like that."

When would Maryland win a ball game, somebody wanted to know from Mr. Dodson, whose team, it seems, has gone for the cellar in its first three games.

"That, I must say at the risk of being trite, is problematical," replied Dobson. "Perhaps we will win a game from Western Maryland on Saturday, perhaps we will not. Football is a very uncertain sort of game. Take the psychology of it, for example."

There was a general settling back in the chairs, for Mr. Dobson, on his favorite topic of psychology, is no mere three-minute speaker.

Futility, Eh!

"Now my boys present a problem to me after that 53-0 affair at Syracuse," continued Mr. Dobson. "It is one thing to bounce back from a one-touchdown defeat and another to come back strong after a 53-0 licking. A close defeat is usually a tonic to a college team's morale and the coach, in one sense, is grateful when his team loses a tough game. There is a tendency among the boys of self-censure. That is the ideal psychological condition.

"But a 53-0 defeat is no help to a team's morale, because that kind of a defeat annihilates morale. It steeps the boys in a sense of futility. It has been frustration, but not of the type to inspire a college team to bounce back. It has been of the type to lead to a what's-the-use attitude. That is what I must combat this week."

That, and Western Maryland, Mr. Dobson was cruelly reminded.

Flaherty Greets His New Redskin Backs

Redskins Off For Detroit

Turk Edwards Out Manton, Filchok Drill Riley Smith Back

Washington's Redskins, entraining last night for Sunday's game against the Lions at Detroit, carried with them one new joy, one new disappointment.

Transcending all other items was, perhaps, the announcement that Capt. Turk Edwards, spearhead of the Redskins' line play, was definitely lost to the team for the game at Detroit following a shoulder injury suffered against the Giants.

But there was consolation in Head Coach Ray Flaherty's announcement that on Sunday for the first time this season, Quarterback Riley Smith would be in the Redskins' backfield.

Since the start of the season the Redskins have oundered uncertainly in their attack due to the absence of Smith who was hospitalized after the Chicago All-Star game in August.

Smith's leg injury has healed, however, to the point where yesterday he was able to engage in a strenuous workout with the team at Griffith Stadium and Flaherty is prepared to start him against the Lions.

"With Riley in there we'll be a better team," said Flaherty. "Not until he was out of our backfield have most people fully appreciated him. Offensively we should be at our best."

Edwards was not in uniform yesterday at Griffith Stadium and little hope is held that he will be available for the Lions' game. His injury, while not a serious separation of the shoulder, is painful.

Working out with the Redskins for the first time yesterday were Tillie Manton and Frank Filchok, recently acquired backs. Flaherty was impressed particularly with their ability to grasp the Redskins' signals and formations.

To make room for the pair of new backs and reduce to the 30-player limit, Flaherty last night released Quarterback Rink Bond, former Washington State star, who had been released once before earlier in the season, only to be recalled when Smith was injured.

Cards May Sell Farm

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 11—The Columbus Dispatch said today that sale of the Columbus Red Birds, of the American Association, to the National League Cincinnati Reds was "a distinct possibility for the immediate future."

The newspaper stated that Branch Rickey, general manager of the St. Louis Cardinal baseball chain, which owns the Columbus franchise, had discussed the matter last week with Warren Giles, general manager of the Cincinnati Club.

The Cardinals asking price of $500,000 for the franchise, stadium and players was said to be the only barrier to the deal.

St. Louis, Oct. 11 (AP).—Branch Rickey, general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, sputtered and hesitated when he was asked today about a report the Cardinals were negotiating the sale of their Columbus farm to the Cincinnati Reds.

Finally Rickey said, "I just can't discuss that. I won't deny it or confirm it."

Golf Ball Kills Cow; Farmer Digs Up Links

Cornith, N. Y., Oct. 11 (AP).—A golfer swung a club that hit a ball that killed a cow. That made Owner John Washburn so angry that he took shovel and ax and destroyed a golf course on his farm.

Running Back Kicks Better Done by Pros, Sammy Baugh Says

Better Protected Than College Players Signal System of Pros Helps Game Defensive Huddle Has Many Drawbacks

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh.

(Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.)

The spectators in the stands always applaud a clever run-back of a kick because it is, unquestionably, one of the most thrilling plays in football. It presents the spectacle of a man apparently running against heavy odds.

SAMMY BAUGH.

They may be true in college football. I mean that it may be true that the odds are heavily against a punt receiver. But in professional football he gets a better break. He gets much better blocking.

The punt receiver in professional football isn't exactly on his own when he's taking a kick. It is not a spontaneous, helter-skelter return that he is attempting. It is a carefully prearranged journey that he starts up-field after taking the ball.

Because most pro football teams now treat punt receiving as a highly-specialized offensive play. When it is believed that the opposition is going to kick, defensive signals are called. The safety man is told whether to run to the right or left after taking the ball. The remainder of the defensive team knows in which direction he will run.

Thus we do not see in pro football the mistakes of the collegians on kicks. Rarely do we see a punt receiver dashing down one side of the field while his blockers are on the other. He must run to the right if that play is called, because his blockers will be attempting to clear a path to the right. Or he must run to the left, as the case may be.

* * * *

The punt receiver who doesn't follow those prearranged signals is apt to be fined, stiffly. The failure of one of our young backs to follow signals after taking a punt cost the Redskins a victory against Brooklyn.

The New York Giants have introduced something new on the defense generally by going into a defensive huddle while the offensive team is in its huddle. I was not impressed with the defensive huddle when I saw it. It is too difficult to anticipate what will be the offensive team lines up for the center's snap. It is then that plays are usually "tipped off" by tell-tale actions of the offensive backs or linemen.

And I actually know of a case where the defensive huddle was made to look very stupid. Jersey City, the Giants' minor league farm team, was in its defensive huddle in a game not long ago when the team with the ball suddenly decided to run a play before Jersey City came out of its huddle. They ran through 'em for a touchdown.

It appears, too, that the five-man line is being discarded by most of the teams which adopted it as a defensive measure last season. It was introduced as an improved defense against forward passes, but I do not believe that it has succeeded.

Ray Flaherty, the Redskins' coach, never was worried by the New York Giants' adoption of the five-man line on the defense. Before the Redskins' game with the Giants last season he said we could run the Giants' line ragged if they held to a five-man line-up, and that we could open up the secondary for either short or long passes because of the threat of our running attack. And that is what happened. We beat the Giants, 49-14, with a mixture of runs and passes.

When a team starts pulling men out of the line to bolster its pass defense, there is always one thing to remember. Those extra men in the secondary are tackles, or guards. They are not actually pass-defense men. Usually they don't have the speed or the agility of backs. They are strong in numbers in the secondary defense, but too often they are liable to be short on pass-defense technique.

Bucs Return $1,500,000 in Series Advance

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 11.—A greater headache than having a million and a half dollars is returning that amount, Bill Benswanger, president of the Pittsburgh Pirates, admitted today.

A sum totalling $1,500,000 was returned in 165,000 envelopes today. The sum represented checks and money orders for seats to a Pittsburgh World Series which never came off. It cost the club $3,500 postage to return the money.

The club also sank $35,000 into a press box to accommodate 600 writers and about $15,000 for bleacher seats.

"It was the most expensive series we ever played," Prexy Benswanger said.

5 Washington Women Win In Golf Play

Miss Dettweiler Victor Mrs. Meckley, Also 3 Others Triumph At Rodgers Forge

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 11.—Baltimore's future in the 1938 Middle Atlantic Golf championship rests with Mrs. M. Louise Bell, Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow and Mrs. Jerome Sloman in today's quarter finals at Rodgers Forge Golf and Country Club. The other five survivors are Washingtonians.

Helen Dettweiler, the medalist, of Washington, advanced on a 5 and 4 decision over Mrs. Harry C. Trace, of Baltimore. Mrs. Betty Meckley, also from the Capital, eliminated a club mate, Mrs. C. S. Stern, 4 and 3. Other former champions who remain in play are Mrs. Morrow, who conquered Evelyn Marvin, of Rio de Janeiro, 3 and 2, and Mrs. Bell who put out Gladys Greiner 8 and 6.

Mrs. Meckley

Miss Brown, of Washington, reduced her rival's 2 up lead to zero by taking the tenth and eleventh. Her rally extended through the fourteenth, where she held a 2-up lead. The next two, won by Mrs. Schluderberg, made the match even again. Miss Brown, 1937, M. A. medalist and runner-up, scored a birdie on the seventeenth and par on the eighteenth for wins.

In the other 2-up result, Mrs. Myron Davy defeated a fellow-Washingtonian, Mrs. L. G. Pray. The winner was 1 up at the turn and 3 up after the twelfth, where she holed a putt for a birdie 3. Mrs. Pray's rally kept the match alive.

Mrs. Morrow was 3 up at the turn in 42 strokes over Miss Marvin. Mrs. Meckley was out in 44 and 2 up over Mrs. Stern. The latter laid the former a stymie on the fifth and the former retaliated in like style on the eighth. Mrs. Stern three-putted four greens on the first nine.

Miss Dettweiler was 3 up on Mrs. Trace at the ninth. Six of the first nine holes were halved. They shared the twelfth when Mrs. Trace laid a stymie. The latter took the thirteenth as the former's No. 5 iron shot soared over the green near a ditch. Mrs. Trace was trapped, but won.

The lowest outward nine was Mrs. Bell's 40, even par. She had three birdies. Miss Greiner outdrove her, but Mrs. Bell approached and putted well. Miss Greiner had trouble in the ditches. The cards:

Detroit Red Wings Buy Charlie Conacher

Detroit, Oct. 11 (AP).—The Detroit Red Wings today announced the purchase from the Toronto Maple Leafs of Charley Conacher, veteran right wing, who was one of the National Hockey League's leading scorers during the 1935-1936 season.

Conacher, 29 years old, has been on the sidelines most of the last two seasons because of injuries. Jack Adams, Detroit manager, said the deal was a straight cash transaction.

G. W., G. U. Renew Athletic Relations

Colonials Alter Theory of 1931 With New Pact

G. W. Cut Off All Local Relations Then Coming of Redskins May Hurt This Move 'Washington Conference' Would Be Popular

By Lewis F. Atchison.

It is with no small degree of surprise that this writer learns of the athletic pact signed yesterday by George Washington and Georgetown Universities. Surprising because it means, in fact, a repudiation of the athletic policy adopted and proclaimed by the downtown school in the not so distant days of 1931 when the atmosphere was heavy with bickerings among the local schools and a nearby rival.

George Washington, then embarking on what it proudly referred to as a "big league" football career, peremptorily broke off all athletic relations with Catholic University, thereby terminating the city's last, and until then, most flamboyant football rivalry. An attendance of 25,000 fans, and a grade-A assortment of thrills, virtually was guaranteed at their games. It was a hard, punishing and colorful game that packed a tremendous box-office punch.

But Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington, put an end to such goings-on with a statement that his institution frowned on such local rivalries as "unhealhy." We do not recall the exact text of his announcement, but it seems to us that things have become considerably unhealthier since the Redskins moved in, Baugh and baggage, and weaned away the man-on-the-street patronage that George Washington formerly enjoyed.

Balance Unfavorable

Jim Pixlee, the man entrusted with the task of making George Washington a Nationally known team—with every possible assistance from the faculty and alumni, financially and scholastically, explained that it would be highly unprofitable for the Colonials to continue the rivalry.

He pointed out that George Washington, with its enrollment of 7,000 students, was putting most of the money in the box-office, while Catholic University, with a student body of approximately 1,000, was reaping a rich harvest. The trade balance, in a word, was unfavorable. And Dr. Marvin whole-heartedly supported this stand.

Hence, it is surprising to see him repudiate that policy seven years later, by signing a pact with a school boasting an enrollment of approximately 2,500 students. Moreover, it was George Washington who approached Georgetown on the idea of resuming relations.

But there is more to the story than those few facts. Pixlee scoured the Southwest and Midwest for his talent, leaving no stone untouched to secure the best available. But his tenure ended in abject failure. George Washington failed to set the world on fire.

Byrd Steps In

When the Colonials made overtures to Southern schools for games the University of Maryland authorities accused it of poaching on its territory, and "Curley" Byrd was qquick to appeal to the Southern Conference to halt such tactics. Byrd, however, failed to keep Alabama, Tennesssee and Auburn from sending their elevens to Washington, but the Tennessee game backfired on George Washington.

Almost on the eve of the game, the Vols protested the use of three G. W. regulars, offering evidence that they had played their allotted time at Texas colleges. All three saw the Tennessee game from the bench. Blame for this incvident was placed at Maryland's door, although nothing was said about the matter officially.

Now, with the Redskins attracting the crowds, Pixlee gone, and a new, straightforward policy regarding the eligibility of its athletes in vogue, George Washington appears to have turned over a new leaf. In playing football with Georgetown and basketball with Maryland, it envisions, perhaps, the forerunner of a Washington Conference that some day might include all four major schools and be profitable to all.

Bergman Backs Local League; Epply Opposes

Arthur J. Bergman, athletic director of Catholic University, and Geary Epply, athletic director of Maryland University, last night expressed delight over the resumption of athletic relations between George town and George Washington, but were sharply devided in opinion as to the advantage of a proposed District football league. Bergman heartily favored it; Epply just as heartily opposed it.

BERGMAN

Bergman, long one of the leading advocates of a footbal conference to include aryland, Georgetown, Catholic and George Washington, the District's major sports colleges, said:

"I am sincerely delighted to receive the news that Georgetown and George Washington will rene wtheir old athletic rivalries, for I think it will prove highly beneficial to football in the District. It should be a decided stimulant."

Asked if Catholic University would favor a District football league, Bergman replied:

"I have always advocated such a league and you can say for me that Catholic University would be receptive to proposals of games between it and any or all of the other three District schools."

Epply shared Bergman's enthusiasm over the resumption of the G. W.-G. U. rivalry, terming it "a splendid move which should help local football tremendously." But the Terrapin leader had definite and strong arguments against formation of a District football league. He said:

"Maryland and George Washington have been discussing for some time the possibility of a football game between the institutions and, since G. W. adopted new eligibility rules similar to those of the Southern Conference, we have no objection to playing the Colonials. That is borne out by the basketball game scheduled with G. W. next season. We play Georgetown in both football and basketball and usually meet Catholic University in track. Basketball and baseball leagues, I

Grid Contest Is Scheduled Next Season

Meet on Court in '39 Baseball Also Planned Start of League Seen Alumni Welcome Step

By Jack Munhall.

The most important step yet taken in the formulation of a District sports league to include Georgetown, George Washington, Catholic and Maryland Universities was accomplished yesterday when Georgetown and George Washington made announcement of the renewal of athletic relations between the two schools, starting with the 1939 football season.

As Max Farrington, acting manager of athletes at George Washington, and H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of athletics at Georgetown, signed contracts after a short conference at the Hilltop, one of the biggest obstacles to the formation of a District conference was surmounted, those closely connected with the situation agreed.

For it was George Washington that was chiefly responsible for the severance of athletic relationships with Georgetown after the 1923 football season, which marked the Colonials' ninth defeat in 10 games with the Hoyas, and it was George Washington that broke off its football relations with Catholic University in 1930. At that time a statement from the office of Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of George Washington University, said that the school considered such local rivalries "unhealthy" because they led to high tension between student bidies of the competing schools.

Alumni Achieved Move

Now that George Washington apparently has changed its policy in this regard, the road seems wide open for the beginning of a District conference, so long sought by alumni of the four major local colleges. It was the pressure applied by these alumni and by players of the various schools anxious to build traditional Washington rivalries that has led to the move yesterday by Georgetown and George Washington.

Gradually, the four colleges have been approaching a more friendly and harmonious relationship, due principally to informal athletic contests in the past few years. Georgetown and George Washington have been scrimmaging in basketball for several years. And last spring and again this fall Catholic and Maryland, and Georgetown and George Washington elevens have opposed in informal football elevens. In each instance, the conduct of players and students alike has been above reproach, and through their sportsmanlike and friendly association, officials of the four colleges noticeably became more interested in games proposed between Georgetown and George Washington, Catholic and George Washington, and George Washington and Maryland. These proposals have sprung up at least once each season for many years. But always there has been red tape, involving eligibility and dates, etc., so tangled that it appeared such games would never materialize.

New Code Helped

George Washington last year removed a point of contention between it and Maryland by adopting a code of athletic regulations similar to that governing schools in the Southern Conference, of which Maryland is a member.

The renewal of the Georgetown-George Washington rivalry was received enthusiastically by alumni of both schools as well as school officials. The Rev. John J. Kehoe, Georgetown faculty director of athletics and a member of the body that conferred with George Washington officials in closing the contract, said:

"George Washington is one of our oldest opponents. Games began in the last century. The reason they were discontinued was because of the comparative weakness of G. W. teams. The reason no longer exists.

May these contests continue the fine spirit of friendly rivalry and lead to even greater success in the football world for both Georgetown and George Washington University."

Game October 28

The Georgetown-George Washington football game for next season is scheduled for October 28, and probably will be held at Griffith Stadium. Dates have not yet been settled for basketball meetings between the rivals but announcement of this is expected soon. Baseball will be deferred until 1940 when G. W. again plans a varsity nine.

George Washington and Georgetown football teams met 10 times between 1890 and 1923 and the Hoyas won nine times, the teams playing to a scoreless tie in 1907.

1890—G. U., 6; G. W., 0.
1903—G. U., 33; G. W., 0.
1904—G. U., 60; G. W., 0.
1905—G. U., 11; G. W., 6.
1906—G. U., 16; G. W., 6.
1907—G. U., 0; G. W., 0.
1916—G. U., 47; G. W., 0.
1921—G. U., 28; G. W., 0.
1922—G. U., 46; G. W., 6.
1923—G. U., 20; G. W., 0.

Wisconsin Probes 'Gambling' on Football Train

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—The attorney general's office announced today it was investigating alleged gambling on a special train that carried Wisconsin football fans to Iowa City last Saturday.

The inquiry was being made by Newell S. Boardman, assistant attorney general, who will determine whether there was any violation of a Wisconsin law which gives all agents of a railroad company power to arrest any persons engaged in betting or gambling on its trains, and makes such agents equally liable with the railroad company for fines of $50 to $200 for permitting gambling.

Western Wallops Anacostia, 27-0, in Inter-High Contest

Crack Indian Defense in 2d Quarter

Barnes Scores First Tally Twice in 2d Anacostia Threatens Injured List Grows

Western High found its stride yesterday in an interhigh series game with Anacostia and defeated the newest school in the series by a score of 27 to 0.

Unable to penterate the Indians' 10-yard marker until three plays from the end of the first quarter, Western profited by a long pass and a couple of 4-yard jaunts by Fred Stone and George Barnes to leave the ball on Anacostia's 1-yard line as the first period whistle sounded. From that point Barnes accepted the ball on a reverse and plunged for the initial score on the first play of the second period.

Western, however, was able to mark up five first downs in that opening period, advancing the ball from its own 20 to Anacostia's 1-yard line. Blocking a kick gave Western the ball after the Indians had tried one running play, but a 15-yard penalty for holding set the Westerners back until Barnes and Stone took over.

The third period proved the most profitable for the winners. Two more touchdowns were csored, Tommy O'Hanlon grabbing a 40-yard aerial for one and Stone taking off at a tangent, outrunning the whole Anacostia team and crossing the line untouched for the other. O'Hanlon missed the first conversion but the second sailed squarely between the posts.

Western finished its scoring on the opening play of the last quarter. After recovery of a partly-blocked punt on Anacostia's 23-yard line late in the third period, another pass, Stone to Jake Hilary, added 6 points as the fourth period started. Stone made the extra point with a rush through the center of the line.

Anacostia then made a last-ditch attempt at a score. A kick over its own goal line gave the boys from across the river the ball on their own 20-yard line and they started a march down the field that Western couldn't stop short of its 16-yard stripe. In quick succession, a pass, Art Faircloth to Tony Ingwerson, gave the Anacostians one first down, two off-side penalties against Western added another and two more passes in which Faircloth figured added yet two more. The game ended with Western making a futile attempt to gain lost ground.

Most notable about the game was the number of players absent from at least part of it because of injuries. Anacostia probably suffered the most, going into the game minus Bob Gordon, star half, and being forced to retire Otis Scott, an end, and Delbert Coon, tackle, during the clash.

Gordon's leg was injured so badly in the Wilson game he will be off the squad until November 1 or later. Scott, playing his first game of high school football, suffered a cut eyelid making a tackle in the fourth quarter, and Coon was taken out in the disastrous second with a broken right ankle. He was removed to Providence Hospital.

Western's Jack Neam was forced out with a lip injury that necessitated stitches to stop the flow of blood, and Rip Dwyer, Western half, was unable to go into action at all because of a cracked arm received in scrimmage Thursday.

Wind Dies; Race Called

By the Associated Press.

Aboard the Schooner Gertrude L. Thebaud off Gloucester, Mass. (via Radio Telephone), Oct. 11.—Light airs today prevented completion of the second sailing contest between the American challenger, Capt. Ben Pine's Gertrude L. Thebaud, and the Canadian defender of the International Fishermen's Trophy, Capt. Angue Walters' Bluenose.

When the contest was called off, Bluenose was leading Thebaud by about a mile. At 2:55 (E.S.T.) with only a minute remaining and baout 15 miles of the 36-mile course unsailed, the race committee came alongside to notify Capt. Pine the race was ended and to ask him if he would sail tomorrow.

Capt. Pine roundly criticized Capt. Charles M. Lyons, of the committee, for permitting the contest to continue long after it was obvious the boats had no chance of finishing within the 6-hour time limit.

Down in Front

With Richards Vidmer

New York, Oct. 11.—It must be true that coming events, however sad, cast their shadows before them, and perhaps I should have been prepared for the shock that came on Monday afternoon. Certainly my thoughts had been forcused repeatedly in that direction even in the midst of a World's Series. But let's go back to the beginning of a series of events and conversations which preceded the final tragic news.

A week before, on a sunny Sunday afternoon, I happened to be at New York Military Academy, indescribably stirred by the stern gray buildings and barracks of the miniature West Point that also overlooks the Hudson.

VIDMER.

I seemed to sense the spirit of the corps even before they told me about the football game they had played the previous day. It developed that they had been trailing 12 to 0 with only four minutes left to play, but they were not beaten. They came with a rallying rush in those few brief remaining moments, scored once, and then again and when the final whistle blew the score was tied, 12 to 12.

It was, indeed, a thrilling success, but I couldn't refrain from adding that it would have been an even more thrilling victory, and easily accomplished if there just had been someone who could kick a point after touchdown.

"It happened," explained Alexis Boisseau, the coach, "that my kicker had been in the game during the last quarter and had been taken out. I couldn't put him back again."

Which made me thing of a youngster with whom I was rather familiar many years ago. He was the mascot of the Army football team at the time, and one night the squad had practiced late and a whole sack of footballs was left behind when finally the field was cleared. The next day the youngster chopped down an apple tree in his back yard, erected a goal post and started practicing. Every day, hour after hour, he practiced, and when a couple of years later he went away to prep school he was practically perfect within his limits.

Reward for Patience

And recalling this, a thought occurred. On every football squad, whether in school or college, there is some eager lad who hasn't a chance ever of making the team. Perhaps because he is too light, maybe because he is too little, maybe because he is too slow. Yet he comes out to practice, day after day, just in the hope that he can in some way help.

It seems to me that instead of trying to teach such a lad to block and tackle, carry the ball or scrimmage, when all the time

Trimble Out Of Navy Line

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 11.—Guard troubles haunted the naval coaches today as they drilled their squad on defense plays against Yale.

With Bex Trimble, 200-pound right guard, out for the remainder of the season with a fracture of a verterbra, the Navy is seeking substitutes for him. Trimble, who is from Evansville, Ind., suffered his injury in the game with Virginia Saturday. X-ray pictures revealed the extent of the injury today.

Dan Baughman, 175-pound end from Madison, S. Dak., was the first substitute to be taken in Trimble's place, but later in the day Lieut. H. J. Hardwick, head coach, tried out R. H. Buckley, of West New York, N. J., a newcomer to the squad, for the place. Later he called Charles L. Burbage, Ocean City, Md., to try for the vacancy.

In addition to the defense plays the team went through plays tending to polish their tackling, blocking and timing.

G. W. Squad Off for West

Will Play Colorado Hoyas in Hard Drill Cards, Terps Work

Buoyed by successive victories over Furman and Butler and highly confident of preserving its perfect record, the George Washington football squad will leave at 5 o'clock this afternoon for Boulder, Col., where on Saturday the University of Colorado will be met in one of the high spots of the Colonials' schedule.

The Colonials will pause in Chicago tomorrow morning and engage in a practice at Soldiers' Field designed to break up the lengthy and tiresome train trip and allow the players to unlimber cramped muscles. The team came through the Butler game in fine shape and will be at full strength for the Westerners.

Georgetown, responding to Coach Jack Hagerty's warnings not to hold Randolph-Macon too lightly in view of the team's spotty performance against Roanoke last Saturday, showed marked improvement yesterday. Especially pleasing to Hagerty was the better brand of blocking shown. With his boys blocking in a more efficient manner, Hagerty plans to devote remaining practice this week to the testing of new plays and the study of Randolph-Macon formations as outlined to him by scouts.

Catholic University's intersquad scrimmage yesterday hailed on an alarming note when Nick Sarelas, regular fullback, was knocked unconscious while tackling Joe Guyon. He was struck above the nose on the forehead by one of the Indian halfback's churning knees. After an examination by Dr. Jack Simpson, however, Sarelas regained consciousness and is believed to have suffered no lasting injury. He will be rested for 24 hours and if his condition is satisfactory he will be allowed to face West Virginia Wesleyan Saturday in the Cardinals' first home game of the season.

The uncertain condition of a number of his star players will prevent Coach Frank Dobson from selecting a starting team for the Western Maryland game on Saturday until after practice today, the Terp mentor announced yesterday.

It is not known whether he will have the services of Nick Budkoff, his outstanding end; Jim Forrester, senior center, and Rip Hewitt, utility back. The return of Bob Brown and Ralph Albarano, both tackles, is doubtful. Other uncertain starters are Charlie Weidinger, Joe Devlin and Joe Murphy, backs; Bob Smith, reserve center, and Francis Beamer, end.

Al Houghton Shoots 66 at Capital

Al Houghton shot one of the finest rounds ever made on Capital Golf Club course yesterday when he posted a four-under-par 66 in an informal match with Dick Harding, George Burke and Charles Pettijohn.

The well-known professional went out in 32 and returned in 34. His rounds were 454-333-334 and 434,443-534.

Wrigley Has New 6-Point Program For 1939 Cubs

Hartnett Will Get Contract for One Year Dizzy Dean and Lazzeri to Stay With Club Co-operative Small Club Ownership Planned

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 11.—In a determined effort to make a real championship team out of the Chicago Cubs, Philip K. Wrigley, owner of the team, today revealed a six point program for the rebuilding of his club.

The program is:

1. The contract to be offered Manager Gabby Hartnett will be for one year only
2. Veteran players, rather than younger men, will be used as trading material but the "finger" has not been put on any player.
3. A system of co-operative ownership of minor league clubs is planned to fortify the Cubs' weak supply of young talent.
4. Tony Lazzeri, if he wants it, will have a place with the organization in 1939 though not necessarily with the Cubs proper.
5. Dizzy Dean remains a strong hope for 1939 although no special winter program except rest has been prescribed.
6. Although physicial limitations prevent a wholesale shakeup, every possible effort to strengthen the club will be made.

WRIGLEY HARTNETT DEAN LAZZRRI

Sitting shirt-sleeved at his desk, the young multi-millionaire smiled at th reaction to Hartnett's impetuous statement that "only four of the Cubs were sure of their jobs." Hartnett had named them—Stanley Hack, Clay Bryant, Bill Lee and Dizzy Dean.

"Gabby dropped in today to explain that," Wrigley said. "He was worried over the stress the newspapers put on it. I told him I could understand how everybody might feel that was the thing that might be done.

"A wholesale shakeup is ridiculous, of course. There is no sense in trading players just to be trading or just because they have slipped a trifle from their peak for one season.

"That's why we're going to wait a few weeks before doing anything. I don't think we will have any difficulty getting together on terms for Hartnett. The contract, however, will be only for one year. None of ours are ever for any more."

"We've got the best club in the league and we have to do our trading in our league," Wrigley continued. "That means we will have to trade with inferior clubs, doesn't it?

The Tough-Wearing
Herringbone
Cheviot Suits
Saxon Weave

$35

The appeal of true Cheviot is its rough and masculine appearance. But an ordinary Cheviot not only looks rough; it feels rough. However, in the Saxon-weave Cheviot cloth, cheviot wool has been blended with soft, fine worsted. The result is a new and better cheviot that retains its roughish, rugged look; yet is smooth to the touch, superbly pliable and generally more pleasing on the back.

Come in today and try on the popular Herringbones and new striped patterns in color moods that remind you of nothing else but Scotland.

Aethelwold Wins Crumpton Purse, Laurel Feature Race; Pays $8.10

Jolly Tar Is Beaten in Nose Finish

Bad Actor at Post Camera Decides 8,000 Watch Events Seabo Rides Victor

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 11.—Aethelwold, a nonwinner in two years of campaigning before this meeting began, scored a thrilling nose victory over Walter M. Jeffords' Jolly Tar in the Crumpton Purse, today's feature race. A competitor in the best company while racing in New York this summer, Jolly Tar was installed an odds-on favorite by the crowd of 8,000 and a series of instances led to his defeat.

He was a wild horse at the post and was started from outside the gates. He was carried wide into the stretch by the winner and he was out-photographed at the wire.

While Jolly Tar was drawing the bulk of the money, Aethelwold was getting surprising support from somewhere. He finally paid an $8.10 mutuel, an unnatural price for a colt beaten at Havre de Grace by the cheapest kind of horses.

Jockey Harry Richards, Jolly Tar's pilot, added to the confusion while the crowd waited for the picture by claiming a foul against the winner. After Jolly Tar had moved abreast of Aethelwold entering the stretch the latter swung wide and came on almost even terms to the wire with Aethelwold responding to Jockey Seabo's whip to barely last.

Blini, from the E. R. Bradley stable, was third in the field of seven but he was 8 lengths behind the thrilling battle for first money. Aethelwold ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:45 over a fast track.

A couple of well played horses teamed to produce a $22.30 daily double. After Braxton, a $5.80 shot, scored in the first race, Don Christmas' Lady Solace came through with her second triumph of the meeting, to pay an individual mutuel of $6.50.

Prattler Wins Chase

The day's steeplechase resulted in the death of Little Swede, a gelding which was scratched here last Friday because his handlers forgot to take him to the paddock. Little Swede fell and fractured his right hind leg so badly that he had to be destroyed.

The race was won by Prattler, and gave him two steeplechases in a row. He was a $4.20 favorite and led Promoter and Valpuiseaux over the 2-mile course.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRAXTON, $5.80, $3.20, $3.00; EVENING LIGHT, $2.90, $2.30; ZENANA, $10.00.

BRAXTON, sent to serious contention on outside leaving backstretch, rallied to drive to take command inside eighth pole and won going away. EVENING LIGHT, always forward factor, was steadied along to stretch, took command nicely when called on, but could not resist winner. ZENANA improved position gradually on outside and closed gamely. BASS WOOD, off poorly and bothered soon after start, came with bold rush between horses entering stretch and was going fastest of all at end. LADY TIMEROLE shook off DINAMITA to take lead, but weakened in stretch. DINAMITA was through after a quarter. EXTRA GOOD made up some ground. TERESA GINO stopped.

SECOND RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:05½. Off 2:06. Winner, R. E. McConnell's ch. g. (6), by Pick of the Circus—Pop Cane. Trained by J. T. Skinner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:53. (14 jumps.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRATTLER, $4.20, $2.90, $2.40; PROMOTER, $3.20, $2.70; VALPUISEAUX, $3.20.

PRATTLER, fencing nicely, took command in opening quarter, shook off repeated challenges of PROMOTER and finished under drive. PROMOTER was hard ridden from start and showed game effort. VALPUISEAUX lacked speed, but closed with good courage under pressure. WAR PORT weakened nearing end and tired under punishment. BLAIN PEGGY was never a factor. BAFFLER was outrun. LITTLE SWEDE fell at ninth fence, broke leg and was destroyed. PERSIAN PRINCE lost rider at first fence.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:36. Off 2:38½. Winner, D. Christmas's ch. f. (2), by Solace—Marie Rose. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY SOLACE, $6.50, $3.50, $2.60; BALKAN WAR, $3.90, $3.00; OF COURSE, $5.60.

LADY SOLACE, allowed to settle into stride, came around horses with good energy when placed to pressure and wore down BALKAN WAR in final sixteenth. BALKAN WAR was hard ridden to take command entering stretch and weakened in closing stages. OF COURSE set good pace, ran XANTHEIN into defeat, but tired. MY SHADOW was forced wide leaving backstretch and closed gamely. GENERAL MOWLEE showed a good effort while racing on inside. HARDHEARTED came well at end. XANTHEIN stopped to a walk.

Daily Double, Braxton and Lady Solace, Paid $22.30.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:07½. Off 3:10½. Winner, George D. Widener's blk. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRASS CUTTER, $12.60, $3.20, $2.30; CARVOLA, $2.40, $2.10; TIME SIGNAL, $2.40.

GRASS CUTTER, closest to BLUEFIELD'S pace, took command when asked, drew out and held CARVOLA safe while under strong handling. CARVOLA, slow to begin, came out for racing room while bettering position, was carried wide by C NOTE and was closing on winner at end. TIME SIGNAL went to leaders on own courage and went evenly thereafter. ZOSTERA had speed in spots. FAERIE was outrun.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:40½. Off 3:45½. Winner, Mrs. F. A. Carreaud's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE TIME, $18.10, $7.70, $5.20; ROYAL BUSINESS, $4.70, $3.70; KAI-MIN, $4.90.

LITTLE TIME, allowed to race on own courage for half, came to outside for racing room, rallied sharply to drive and won going away. ROYAL BUSINESS improved position gradually, came around leaders to get to front, but could not resist winner. KAI-MIN, racing in pocket along backstretch, came through on rail entering stretch, but weakened in closing test. LABOR DAY was forward factor throughout. BUD'S QUEEN was hard used in getting to front and faltered. COMPANY HALT bunt in stretch after moving up menacingly. ODDESA LAD had early speed. FRANK BROOKE was through early.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:12½. Off 4:20½. Winner, W. L. Brann's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—AETHELWOLD, $8.10, $3.10, $2.50; JOLLY TAR, $2.70, $2.40; BLINI, $3.00.

AETHELWOLD, showing keen speed from start, drew clear approaching backstretch, went wide entering stretch and held on with excellent courage under punishment. JOLLY TAR, fractious at post and started outside gates, trailed field for half under stout restraint, moved up boldly approaching stretch, was carried out by winner and hung in closing drive. Richard's foul claim against winner was disallowed. BLINI was forwardly placed to stretch and weakened. SUNNYSHORE was held safe. BILLMAR could not keep up. BROWN KNIGHT had early speed. LANCE CORPORAL was outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:53. Off 4:53½. Winner, W. E. D. C. Business Expands 2% In September

Only 2% Below Normal Nation-Wide Gains 103 of 147 Areas Up

New York, Oct. 11.—Business conditions in Washington for September showed a gain over August, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States conducted by the research department of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., New York and Detroit advertising concern.

Business in Washington at the end of September stood at 4 per cent below normal, representing a gain of 2 per cent over August. At the end of September, 1937, the city's index stood at 2 per cent below normal.

"Improvement in business, noted in many parts of the country the last several months, spread still further during September to include 20 per cent more of the Nation's marketing areas," the report states. "The improvement is country-wide and includes many industrial sections which have heretofore failed to follow the upward national trend."

Gains were registered in 103 areas, as against 74 gains in the previous month. Thirteen areas remained at August levels, which left only 31 to show declines.

District Building & Loan

Dr. George A. Baker was re-elected president of the District Building & Loan Association at the annual meeting of the shareholders last night. Henry Gilligan was returned to office as vice president and attorney, and F. Willson Camp as secretary-treasurer. Shareholders were told that present resources of $1,335,000 were the highest in history. All directors were re-elected, consisting of John H. Davis, Charles H. Frame, William F. Friel, Warren W. Grimes, Otis H. Johnson, Harold Austin Wood and the three officers.

Mayflower Hotel

For the six months ended July 31 the Mayflower Hotel Corporation reports gross income in excess of $1,250,000. This information, taken from a recent statistical study of the corporation prepared by Arnott, Baker & Co., also shows that the hotel earned at the rate of 14.7 per cent on the $4,189,300 outstanding first-mortgage bonds, before depreciation. Five per cent has been paid regularly in the first-mortgage issue and real estate taxes are paid to date. The management over the last three years, according to the report, has spent in excess of $750,000 in rehabilitation and air-conditioning.

The financial structure of this property was reorganized in 1935, former first-mortgage bondholders receiving new first-mortgage bonds to the extent of 60 per cent of their former holdings. These investors received, in addition, their pro-rata share of complete ownership of the property.

Soy Bean Harvest To Set New Record

Chicago, Oct. 11 (AP).—The 1938 harvest of soy beans, which crop experts estimate will break all production records in the unuited States, was well under way today in the heart of the Western Hemisphere producing regians.

With beans the highest priced article in the grain market here, crop experts estimated the value of the prospective crops in excess of $30,000,000, or only slightly less than last year. Total production wes estimated from 46,000,000 to 50,000,000 bushels, compared with 40,997,000 in 1937 and 44,378,000 in 1935, the previous record.

Treasury Borrows At 0.022 Per Cent

The Secretary of the Treasury announces that that tenders for $100,000,000, or thereabouts, of 90-day Treasury bills, to be dated October 13, 1938, and to mature January 11, 1939, which were offered on October 7, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

The total applied for was $425,732,000, and the total acepted, $100,040.000 The average price was 99.995, equivalent to a rate of 0.022 per cent.

U. S. Steel Corp. To Meet Cuts

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Oct. 11.—An announcement by Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, subsidiary of U. S. steel, that it would "meet any prices instituted by independents" on sheet steel for the automotive trade, brought into the open today recent "unofficial" price concessions ranging up to $4 a ton.

The purchasing agent for one large automobile company said that prices $4 under the published quotations for sheet steel had been offered by some steel manufacturers for two months because the supply of sheet steel exceeded orders.

C. V. McKaig, vice president of U. S. Steel in charge of sales, was quoted here as saying he expected no official announcement of reduced prices by his company, although, he said, "we had to follow." McKaig was here on a business trip.

Most of the large automobile companies, including the Ford Motor Co., which was reported to have contracted for 50,000 tons at the unofficially reduced price, declined to comment on the price cuts.

Retail Advertising 11.3% Under Last Year

Chicago, Oct. 11.—Retailers' use of display space in newspapers during the first 40 weeks of this year ended October 1, was 11.3 per cent below the corresponding period of last year, according to a report released here today by Advertising Age.

All newspapers in the 79 important markets used as the basis for this report showed a total of 689,890,201 lines for the period against 777,369,378 lines for the compared 1937 period.

Under a Third Of Major Rails Earn Charges

23 Out of 73 Carriers Only 8 Above 1937 18 Earn Net on Common

New York, Oct. 11.—Taking into consideration the railroad financial reports through August, traffic figures for September, and the prospects for October, November and December, the Standard Statistics Co. has estimated the earnings of 73 major railroads for the full year.

These estimates show that only 23 of the 73 carriers will earn their fixed charges this year and many of these 23 are doing so only by curtailing maintenance, which for the first seven months was more than $150,000,000 under the similar seven months of 1937.

Of this entire list of 73 railroads, only eight will report any improvement over 1937 and of these eight only three will report any net for the common shares. The other five will report lesser deficits.

Net for the common shares is expected to be shown by 18 of the 73 roads and for some few of the 18 reporting anything, the amounts will be extremely small. In 1937, 30 railroads reported some net for the common shares.

	Net per common share 1937	1938
Atch., T. & S. F.	$0.60	$0.65
Baltimore & Ohio	d1.20	d6.60
Chesapeake & Ohio	4.43	2.44
Chi. Burl. & Quincy	2.87	1.98
Chi., Mil., St. P. & P.	d17.19	d21.21
Chi. & N. Western	d10.34	d11.28
Chi., Rock I. & Pac.	d17.65	d22.35
Erie	d1.97	d9.69
Great Northern	4.04	.12
Illinois Central	1.62	d0.56
Louisville & Nashville	6.07	2.02
Mo. Pacific	d14.95	d23.40
N. Y. Central	.99	d2.90
N. Y. N. H. & Hart.	d7.09	d10.05
Norfolk & Western	22.14	13.40
Northern Pacific	.05	d2.29
Pennsylvania	2.07	.88
Southern Pacific	.20	d2.37
Southern Railway	d1.69	d4.66
Union Pacific	6.15	6.17

(d) Deficit.

Of these 20 largest roads, only 8 are expected to show any net for the common this year, with the amounts ranging from 12 cents for Great Northern to $13.48 for Norfolk & Western. Last year there were 12 roads in this class. Only 2 of the 20 will do better this year than in 1937, and in both cases the gain is only a few cents a share.

Pre-Holiday Wheat Prices Are Lower

Market Is Narrow Exports Are Light Corn at Season's Low

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—Confronted by a holiday tomorrow, the Chicago wheat market fluctuated nervously up and down within narrow limits today and ended a little lower. Serving to pull values down at the last was the fact that fresh export purchasing of North American wheat totaled but 300,000 bushels, all of it Canadian. A further weight on values was news of continued favorable conditions for crops in Argentina.

Responsive to persistent liberal receipts, 356 cars in Chicago today, corn equalled the season's bottom price record.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ⅜ down, compared with yesterday's finish; December, 64¼@64⅜; May, 65¼@65⅝; corn unchanged to ½ lower; December, 44⅝@44¾; May, 48@48⅛; oats, ⅛@¼ off; rye showing ⅜ decline, and provisions a setback of 7 to 10 cents.

Cotton Dips December 8.28

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—An early advance of 7 to 10 points in cotton today failed to hold owing to increased liquidation and hedging. December, which had advanced to 8.39, reacted to 8.28, with final prices 2 points net higher to 2 lower.

The market opened 2 to 4 pointe higher in response to steady Liverpool cables and on continued trade buying of near and foreign buying of distant months. The advance in the near months, however, attracted increased liquidation and transferring to the later positions, partly for foreign account.

Idle Men Idle Money Big Problem

Girdler Sees Task Busy Dollars, Busy Men Third of Capital Idle

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—The employment of idle men and dollars was described by T. M. Girdler, Republic Steel Corporation chairman, today as "the great human and economic task which needs to be undertaken in this country today."

The present necessities, he said in a prepared address at organized safety's silver jubilee, were to "a great decree analogous to the want of 25 to 30 years ago of a fighting movement to safeguard human life. Speaking to the metals section of the National Safety Council's Congress, Girdler said:

"Hand in hand with unemployment for men and women is unemployment for dollars. It is estimated that fully a third of the Nation's capital is idle, and its idleness is caused by uncertainties of the present and confusions in the outlook. When dollars are busy men are employed."

Sees Improvement

"I think it is possible to see signs of improvement in prospect over the months ahead, but serious obstacles to genuine and sound industrial prosperity remain in the path."

Girdler, who is also president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, said he believed that the attribution of unemployment to technological improvements in industry was an "utterly false diagnosis."

"There is, of course," he said, "unemployment in the steel industry today due to the current depressed state of operations, but at no time has the decline in employment been anything near so sharp as the drop in demand and production. At the beginning of this year, when operations had fallen 65 per cent from the top in 1937, employment had declined only 21 per cent and payrolls only 49 per cent.

"Thus the steel industry has done its utmost to cushion the blow of unemployment, and demonstrated its sense of social obligation in present emergencies, just as it did a quarter of a century ago when it took the lead in the movement for safety."

Southern Railway Re-elects Directors

Richmond, Va., Oct. 11 (AP).—Stockholders of the Southern Railway Co. in annual meeting today re-elected four members of the board of directors for three-year terms. They were Dr. John Stewart Bryan, of Richmond; Oliver Iselin and Gerrish H. Milliken, of New York, and John K. Ottley, of Atlanta.

The stockholders, on motion of Dr. John Stewart Bryan, adopted a tribute to the memory of the late Fairfax Harrison, president of the Southern Railway Co. for nearly 25 years.

Martin McCarthy's 75 Wins Medal Round in Columbia Title Play

Stevinson's 78 Best Score Yesterday Nee Finds Trouble and Shoots 82 Championship Matches Set Today

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Martin F. McCarthy's 75 stood up for medal honors in the Columbia Club championship, as yesterday's best score was the 78 turned in by the seven-time champion, Miller B. Stevinson. Maury Nee, who ranks with Stevinson and defending champion Harvey Johnson to win the title, was out in 38 and needed a 36 to tie but soared to 43 for an 82.

Other low scores turned in the second day's qualifying included 81s by George M. Ferris, Dr. W. N. Bradshaw, Albert R. MacKenzie and Capt. F. L. Parks.

Championship flight matches today pit Johnson against Albert MacKenzie, and Stevinson against Lord, while Nee plays Maj. Francis and medalist McCarty, who is in the finals of the Beaver Dam tournament, plays E. E. Krewson, one of the four 80 breakers in the medal round.

Contenders were paired on scores and handicaps from the second flight through the seventh. Pairings, starting times and scores for the seven flights:

Cubs

Besides, those recent newspaper stories have hurt us a lot. If the best club in the league can't use its players, how about the other clubs? It would be like holding a distress sale—and at a distress sale you can only get thirty cents on a dollar.

Develop Own Players

Wrigley declared he was more interested in developing his own players than in buying other teams' stars.

"I'm still against the farm clubs. I have found that working agreements aren't practical," he explained. "But I believe that we will be able to work out something better than that, a sort of co-operative ownership of Minor League clubs. I am a firm believer in co-operative enterprises. For years I have been trying to learn how to run a business without paying salaries, by part ownership instead. That will beat, I believe, working agreements where you scramble arourfd like a bucket of worms, or farm clubs where the owner has no local interest whatsoever."

Mrs. Masten Wins, 3 and 2

Beats Mrs. Tschiffely Mrs. Martin Victor Play at Washington

Mrs. William Masten, favorite to win the Washington Golf and Country Club women's championship, played the best round of the initial matches yesterday to win 3 and 2 over Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely. One of the co-medalists, Mrs. G. C. Roney, lost to Mrs. R. N. Sutton while the other, Mrs. Wilda Martin, won on the last hole over Mrs. Hegenbuckle.

Two of the matches in the fifth flight were won by 10 and8 margins, with Mrs. Samuel Hauser and Mrs. E. W. Breitenbach turning in the victories.

Rams Release Giannoni Sign Jack Robinson

Cleveland, Oct. 11 (AP).—The Cleveland Rams of the National Pro Football League lopped Johnny Giannoni, 215-pound end from St. Mary's College, California, off their pay roll today. Giannoni, a starter in the first Ram game this year, suffered a shoulder separation in practice and has seen little action since.

To replace him the Rams signed Jack Robinson, formerly tackle for the Chicago Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers, and with the Pittsburgh football Pirates early this season.

Detroit Doctors Aid Loyalists, Bill City, Dies Is Told

Detroit, Oct. 11 (AP).—A charge that several Detroit physicians examined Michigan recruits for the Spanish government armed forces, then billed the city for the service as tuberculin tests for indigents, was made by Emmett A. Collier today before the Dies committee investigating un-American activity.

Collier, former Detroit auto worker, was one of three witnesses at the hearing before Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, and Representative Harold G. Mosier (Democrat), Ohio.

Collier testified that at Communist Party headquarters in Detroit he was "recruited" for service in Spain, and that at his physical examination the doctors made him sign City of Detroit poor aid slips stating he had received a free tuberculin test and was unable to pay for it.

Proposals

WASHINGTON SUBURBAN SANITARY DISTRICT.
(MARYLAND)
THREE PER CENT SERIAL WATER BONDS.

Sealed bids for the purchase of Series "OO" of the Washington Suburban Sanitary District bonds in the sum of $110,000, bearing 3% interest, payable semiannually and dated October 1, 1938, maturing annually on October 1, as follows:

$4,000, 1940-1943; $5,000, 1944-1948; $6,000, 1949-1952; $7,000, 1953-1955, and $8,000, 1956-1958, all inclusive, will be received at its office in the Tower Building, Washington, D. C., on or before 3 o'clock p. m. on Wednesday, OCTOBER 19TH, 1938, at which time they will be publicly opened and read. Proposals should be enclosed in a sealed envelope and marked "Bid on Bonds" and filed at the office of the Commission before the time above mentioned.

These bonds are issued under the authority of Chapter 389 of the Acts of 1937, of the General Assembly of Maryland, and are guaranteed unconditionally as to both principal and interest by Montgomery and Prince Georges counties by indorsement on each bond.

The payment of principal and interest on these bonds is to be made primarily from receipts from water consumption and service charges under the provisions of Section 4, Chapter 389 of the Acts of 1937.

The proceeds derived from the sale of these bonds will be used for the erection of a 2,500,000-gallon steel standpipe at Bradley Hills and of a 4,000,000-gallon steel standpipe at Wheaton, with concrete foundations.

The approving opinion of Messrs. Masslich and Mitchell, attorneys, of New York City, will be furnished the purchaser without charge.

LEGAL NOTICE—FRIDAY OCT 14
CARL McFARLAND, Assistant Attorney General; ALEX. H. BELL, Jr., Special Assistant to the Attorney General; HENRY F. MOONEY, Special Attorney, IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA. In the matter of the acquisition of the east half of Lot 17 in Section 8 "Barry Farm," as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber Levy Court 2 at folio 1, except that part of said lot taken for widening of Sumner Road and shown on plat recorded in the said Surveyor's Office in Liber 67 at folio 40, and except the part conveyed to the District of Columbia in deed dated May 26, 1917, and recorded in Liber 4011 at folio 60 among the Land Records of the District of Columbia; said part of lot being now assessed for taxation as Lot 887 in Square 5862, in the District of Columbia, District Court Docket No. 2564. Filed October 11, 1938. CHARLES E. SEWART, Clerk. ORDER OF CITATION. Upon consideration of the petition of the United States of America filed herein on the 11th day of October, 1938, it is this 11th day of October, 1938, on or before 3 o'clock p. m. on Wednesday, OCTOBER 19TH, 1938, at which time they will be publicly opened and read. Proposals should be enclosed in a sealed envelope and marked "Bid on Bonds" and filed at the office of the Commission before the time above mentioned.

These bonds are issued under the authority of Chapter 389 of the Acts of 1937, of the General Assembly of Maryland, and are guaranteed unconditionally as to both principal and interest by Montgomery and Prince Georges counties by indorsement on each bond.

The payment of principal and interest on these bonds is to be made primarily from receipts from water consumption and service charges under the provisions of Section 4, Chapter 389 of the Acts of 1937.

The proceeds derived from the sale of these bonds will be used for the erection of a 2,500,000-gallon steel standpipe at Bradley Hills and of a 4,000,000-gallon steel standpipe at Wheaton, with concrete foundations.

The approving opinion of Messrs. Masslich and Mitchell, attorneys, of New York City, will be furnished the purchaser without charge.

A certified check for $1,000 must accompany the bid.

The Commission reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Bob Burns Says—

Yesterday I went into a big department store down town and the counter I visited was so busy I couldn't get waited on. Right across the aisle stood a salesman doing nothin'. Do you think I could get him to wait on me? No sir, it wasn't his department! I think all salesmen should get their trainin' in a small town store.

I remember when I worked in the general store down home, a lady called up one day and she said, "Send me a bucket of lard, tell my husband to come home, send a spool of No. 60 white cotton thread and vote the State Democratic ticket for me."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

OVER AT Agriculture some of the personnel have been understandably dithering over what the department's new streamlining will mean to them individually. There must be some shifting around, they reason, and where there is shifting there often is shifting toward the gate, particularly when the shifting motive is to tighten up joints and bring about that vague and heavy-sounding thing called "Greater Efficiency."

• • • •

But a very high official—who said he had "the employes' viewpoint very much at heart" and who called the dithering "quite understandable"—tells us that "the alarm is groundless; there may be some shifting around, but not very much." In any event, he sees no reason why anyone should get excited.

IN THE War-Navy group they are short 12 guards. "Furthermore, we have to patrol a floor and a half—sign offs are far and few between. We wonder if the doe-ray-me has run out? We have to wonder." The contributor of this wanted anonimity.

THE OTHER day this column noted that of all the places in the big Federal world, the National Archives was tenanted by the most beautiful girls. Bet you can't guess what happened: The word of this pronouncement got round and they all rushed up and kissed Jim Preston, the administrative assistant to the archivist. They thought Preston had given the cue for the pronouncement and they just wanted to reward him. And now just think of the reward Jim Preston got for something we did, the chiseler!

The Archives also has an innovation to relieve the staff of too much piloting of visitors and tourists—who total about 150 a day—through the building. They have set up some 38 photos, showing spots off the tourist route in the building—all of which is very nifty because it saves the staff time, it saves for the Government the time of employes who might waste time looking over their shoulders at the tourists and it saves the tourists the bother of walking into all parts of the building when they only wanted to see the highspots in the first place.

GOINGS-ON: Agriculture's Spelling Club still takes "palindrome," "dinosaur" and the like in stride, falters occasionally on "Fahrenheit" or "fagopyrism" but withal enjoys its meetings every Tuesday at 4:35 p. m. in room 6852, and, above all, they like their prizes, the value of which seldom exceeds one cent . . . "A Nightmare After the Opera"—the fantasy which filled the night for the director after he had seen six operas in a single week and was trying to create a program for the men's ballet; glorious music accompanied by weird exaggerations which have been imagined but never seen on the opera stage before; the Anvil Chorus with women blacksmiths; the Toreador Song with a real bull fight; and the men's ballet. Of such material is the next program of the Agriculture Chorus, to be presented Thursday and Saturday evenings, at 8:30 o'clock in the Agriculture auditorium. Miss Lucille Callahan, local dancer and dancing teacher, has been struggling over the male ballet since August.

The soloists are: Prudence Jackson, Hilda Nelson, May Delle Sandstron, Katharine Warren, with Theresa Hammelman, Alpha Knight, Doris Menter, Fred Fetter, jr., Ralph Marston, Walter Redit, Allan Robey, Vincent Carels, Roy Gray, Carel Tod, John Wilson, Rolla Currie, Robert Freund, jr., Irene Bartlett, Kathryn Campbell, Peg Kennedy and Lillian Novak.

Bailey, Policy Suspect, Indicted In $12,000 Tax Evasion Charge

A Federal grand grand jury in Baltimore late yesterday indicted Carroll Bailey, of Washington, on charges of evading approximately $12,000 in income taxes. Bailey is under indictment in the District on a numbers racket charge.

Bailey, the Government alleged, earned more than $88,000 between 1934 and 1937 and paid less than $50 in income levies. The Federal prosecutor charged that Bailey in his income tax report had declared his income at less than $5,000 for that period.

The Government contended that Bailey's earnings for the three years ranged from $17,000 to $49,000, and asserted that he owed $12,000 in back levies.

Bailey and seven others were arrested here last January in a drive on gambling that netted 29 suspects in a day. The eight were indicted by a District grand jury in March on charges of conducting and conspiring to conduct a lottery.

Bailey's arrest here followed a raid by police on three adjoining and interconnected addresses in 900 block Second street northeast. Led by Sergt. George Deyoe the raiders captured Bailey on a rooftop after he had crawled through a skylight.

Capt. George M. Little, who as chief of the vice squad ordered the raid, disclosed that Bailey's bank statements showed he had made deposits of more than $50,000 for the month of January, 1938. The police squad was accompanied by Internal Revenue agents and deputy marshals.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained. Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)
